Wallet Clew Called 'Plant' In Virginia Slaying of 5

Victim's Billfold Believed Placed In Dead Caretaker's Pocket as Ruse

Purcellville, Va., June 1.—The first clew in the slaying of A. Morris Love, prominent Loudoun County (Va.) farmer, and his wife, son, caretaker and the caretaker's wife today, was dismissed by police investigators tonight as a "plant" by the murders to make the mass slaying appear to be a murder-suicide.

Its discoverer, Dr. Richard Rosenberg, deputy District coroner, joined police in the belief that a check for $1384.94, made out to Love and found with his wallet on the person of Walter Russell, his caretaker, had been placed there to divert suspicion.

Russell had been shot in the heart and his skull crushed, obviating any suspicion, police said, that he might have murdered the others and then committed suicide.

Police Cordon on Guard

A cordon of police stood guard tonight about the rich farm near Purcellville where the five persons apparently were taken completely by surprise by the murderer or murderers, who shot and bludgeoned them to death.

The dead were identified as A. Morris Love, 58; Mrs. Ruth Grubb Love, about 55; James Love, 21; Walter Russell, tenant caretaker, 30, and his wife, Catherine Russell, about 28.

No "Definite Clews"

Early tonight Commonwealth's Attorney Charles F. Harrison, who had barred everyone but police and close relatives from the farm, said there were no definite clews on who the assailant or assailants might be.

Police were holding for questioning in connection with the murder Johnny Parker, Negro, who had been discharged by Love last week. Parker had worked for Love off and on for 25 years, however, and neighbors said he was not the sort of person who would have committed such a crime, despite the fact that he was known, they said, to have quarreled with Love upon occasion.

The Commonwealth's attorney, Loudoun and District police were conducting an investigation in the Loudoun Courthouse at Leesburg tonight.

Adding to the mystery was the fact that a trail of blood led out of the front living room, across the front porch and down the front steps. Investigators disclosed that it was there when they arrived on the scene. Blood was also on the front door handle.

Meanwhile, fear and uncertainty had spread through the county as a result of the brutal slayings. Groups of persons gathered on streets in Leesburg, Hamilton, Purcellville and Round Hill discussing the crime. Purcellville is 55 miles southwest of Washington.

Four of Five Virginia Victims Shot in Heart

Loudoun County Coroner John A. Gibson late last night announced the following results of his inquest in the five slaying deaths near Purcellville:

A. Morris Love, death by a crushed skull by party or parties unknown; Mrs. Love, death by a bullet wound in the heart; James Love, death by a crushed skull and a bullet wound in the heart; Walter Russell, death by a crushed skull and bullet wound in the heart; Mrs. Russell, death by a bullet wound in the head and bullet wound in the heart. All of the bullet wounds were from a .22-caliber rifle.

Red Points Required

Canned Milk Ordered Rationed To Conserve Dwindling Supply

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Shortages in processed milk supplies for civilian use caused the Office of Price Administration yesterday to add evaporated and condensed milk to the country's list of rationed foods.

The OPA order, effective this morning, was issued at request of the War Food Administration and set the ration value at 1 point per pound.

Consumers will use red stamps in War Ration Book 2 for purchase of milk, which was added to the meat and fats rationing program.

At the rate of 1 point a pound, the average infant formula will require the surrender of about 7 points per week, OPA estimated.

Since most families consider their red stamps of great value, it is believed the short supply will thus be saved for babies and invalids, which is what WFA desires.

The OPA urged that "only persons unable to obtain fresh milk spend their points for the limited canned milk supplies."

Meantime the WFA ordered 75 per cent of the monthly production of roller and spray process skim milk powder for June and July be set aside for Government purchase.

Pointing out that dried milk is an especially valuable war export food because it is nutritionally rich and requires relatively little shipping space, officials explained that Government requirements alone are greater than the expected production of 550 million pounds this year.

To increase production of the food, drying facilities are being expanded and dairy farmers are being encouraged to deliver whole milk to plants instead of separating the milk on farms and delivering only cream.

Civilian demands for milk have increased greatly during the past year, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reports. This is due to decreases in the availability of manufactured dairy products and also to increased attention to nutrition, it was explained.

Heretofore, substantial quantities of skimmed milk have been

American submarines have sunk seven Japanese ships—one a destroyer—in new raids on enemy supply routes in the Pacific, the Navy announced last night.

These latest successes of our underseas service were reported as United States troops tightened their hold on bleak Attu Island, killing 400 Japs in a single night's mopping-up operations. Only a small group of enemy troops now remain pocketed in the eastern section of the island.

The toll taken of Japanese shipping reported in yesterday's late Navy communique—seven ships sunk and one probably sunk—raised the total destruction of Nipponese vessels by United States submarines to 240 ships. This includes 169 definitely sunk, 27 probably sunk and 44 damaged.

This unrelenting campaign against enemy supply lines is credited in naval quarters with having contributed greatly to Japan's loss of outposts in the Aleutians and South Seas in recent months.

Steady loss of Nipponese destroyers, transports, tankers and cargo ships, through submarine attacks, make it extremely difficult for the Japs to hold their far-flung chain of bases in the Pacific.

Enemy ships reported sunk by American subs in yesterday's war bulletin were a destroyer, large tanker, large cargo ship, two medium-sized cargo ships, small cargo ship and a medim-sized transport. In addition, a large tanker was listed as having been damaged and probably sunk.

Yesterday's early Navy communique, reporting on operations in the Aleutians over the weekend, said that three separate columns of American troops moving in from the south, southwest and west, came together on the shores of Chichagof Harbor Sunday morning.

The Chichagof Valley area is where the main body of Jap troops made its last-ditch stand, and the 'Coming Events—'

By International News Service

London, June 1.—A reported concentration of more than 100 Allied troop, supply and fuel ships at Gibraltar and a sudden change in the Italian army command strengthened a growing belief tonight that the Battle of Europe may be imminent.

Berlin broadcast a German dispatch from Rome, announcing that Gen. Ezio Rosi, chief of the Italian army's general staff, had "resigned" in order to assume command of an army group, presumably organized for the defense of Italy.

Rosi, according to the broadcast, was replaced as head of the army staff by Gen. Mario Roatta, a former chief of staff. The same Axis announcement said another Italian general, identified as Alfredo Guzzoni, had been appointed also to command an army group.

(The Federal Communications Commission said a German broadcast by the D. N. B. news dispatch identified this army group head as General Giggioni.)

Invasion Date Disputed

The personnel changes in the Italian army leadership suggested that Premier Mussolini may be taking his most trusted and experienced generals out of office jobs and placing them in the field at the head of "army groups" massed in areas where Anglo-American troops would be expected to strike.

British dispatches from the Spanish town of La Linea, neighboring Gibraltar, said that the biggest "invasion fleet" ever assembled at "the Rock" had been observed. Strong naval forces as well as numerous transports, tankers and supply vessels were reported in the huge armada.

One naval formation, including three battleships, three aircraft carriers as well as several cruisers and destroyers, was said to have steamed out of the Gibraltar roadstead Sunday night, but La Linea observers were unable to tell

Japs Attacked West Coast From Sub, Senate Group Told

Reports on three isolated Japanese attacks on the West Coast—two reputedly by planes operating from submarines and one by submarine shelling of an Oregon forest—were disclosed yesterday to have been given to a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee by Forest Service officials.

Lyle F. Watts, chief of the Forest Service, told the committee at a recent executive session that what was believed to have been a bomb dropped by a Japanese plane started a small fire in southern Oregon which was quickly extinguished.

His testimony followed an assertion by Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon that "two different airplanes" had flown over the Coos County area of Oregon and "in Curry County they dropped an incendiary bomb, which did not function." Both counties are in southern Oregon. The date of the alleged attack was not disclosed.

Earl W. Loeridge, assistant chief, who testified with Watts, declared:

"There were three Jap attacks on the West Coast, two of them over the national forests. Planes apparently took off from submarines nearby and came over and bombed the forests without being caught.

"Our lookout man saw them in each case, and in the mouth of the Columbia River a submarine shelled the forest there. In each case we have had these small crews nearby, which could have caught any fire which may have started."

Watts supplemented his assistants' testimony with the statement that the first bomb "did start a fire and our crew put it out," he added:

"They found the bomb fragments, and the nose of the bomb,

B, C Coupons For Gas Cut Half Gallon

OPA Takes Action To Save Supply as Brown Declares Shortage Critical

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

The Office of Price Administration cut B and C gasoline coupons in the Eastern shortage area from three to two and one-half gallons as of 12:01 a. m. today in a continuing effort to maintain vital transportation and still keep within a newly curtailed gasoline allotment.

Although OPA's action came just as the local gasoline drought showed signs of improvement, officials stressed that immediate action was necessary to meet the June allocation of gasoline which was reduced from a previously scheduled 356,000 barrels a day to 326,000 barrels.

At the same time, Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown announced a three-point supplemental drive to keep consumption within available supply.

1. War Price and Rationing Boards are to deny applications for additional rations of gasoline to restore mileage lost as result of the new cut.

2. Present provisions allowing special rations of up to 5 gallons to servicemen on furlough in the shortage area are revoked.

3. Supplemental rations are to be denied to applicants living within a reasonable walking distance of their work, regardless of car pools and lack of other means of transportation. Exceptions will be made only for physical disability or the necessity to transport heavy equipment such as tools.

"The action is tough," said Brown, "because the going is tough—so tough that it is no longer necessary to point out that there is a critical shortage in the East."

While not stating that no further curtailments will be made, Brown pointed out that he was cognizant of the fact that any additional cuts will necessarily result in hardships to many people dependent upon their passenger cars for transportation to their jobs.

OPA Will Be Severe

He indicated, however, that his office would take whatever action necessary, no matter how severe, to save a required 30,000 barrels of gasoline a day, an amount that is not existent and yet is theoretically available on basis of coupons outstanding.

Petroleum Administrator for War Harold L. Ickes told Brown that the downward revision in gasoline allotment was made necessary by continuing high military demands, excessive civilian consumption over the past several weeks, an interruption in oil traffic from the West by the flood.

In the District, the American Automobile Association reported a slightly eased situation as emergency supplies continued to roll in by tank truck, largely, and by barges. Several stations were said to have from 3000 to 4000 gallons of gasoline on hand, a supply that normally meets a day's demand.

As contrast to several days last week when practically no gasoline stations were open for business, the AAA reported that at least 250 sta-

Cargo Ship Yards Built 175 in May

Record Production Now Is at Rate Of 20 Million Tons Yearly, Admiral Says

Merchant shipyards of the United States delivered 175 vessels aggregating 1,782,000 deadweight tons in May, a new record.

The ships included 15 16,000-ton tankers and 120 Liberty ships, the Maritime Commission said in announcing the total yesterday.

Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery told a press conference that production now has reached a rate of approximately 20 million tons annually, more than 1 million tons above the 1943 production goal.

These are deadweight tonnage figures, which the commission regards as the most accurate of the several methods of giving a ship's size. Roughly, a ship will carry cargo equivalent to its deadweight tonnage.

Vickery reported that the dry cargo merchant fleet of the United Nations has increased each month since August, and now exceeds the tonnage at the outbreak of the war.

He added, however, that the United Nations tanker fleet is not as large as at the start of the war; but in recent months has gained consistently.

Asked for comment on a statement by James F. Byrnes, director of war mobilization, that this country now is building merchant ships four times as fast as they are being sunk, Vickery said:

"We did quite a bit better than that last month."

To provide greater tanker tonnage to carry petroleum products to the world's war theaters, Vickery disclosed, about 100 Liberty ships, the mass production cargo carrier, will be made into tankers.

The Liberty tankers will be built by the Delta Co. of New Orleans and California Shipbuilding Co., Wilmington, Calif.

Vickery also reported that the first aircraft carrier built by the Henry J. Kaiser yard at Vancouver, Wash., will have its trial runs this week. He declined to give any details.

Backers Map Move to Call Up Antistrike Bill in House Today

Ranking members of the House Rules Committee last night served notice they will move in the House today to call up the Connally-Smith antistrike bill, aimed directly at the current U. M. W. walkout and generally at strikes in any war industry.

High officials of five Government war and labor agencies meanwhile directed a withering fire at key sections of the far-reaching measure at postreport hearings by the House Military Affairs Committee.

The committee went through the unusual motions of hearings on a bill it had already favorably reported, at hastily summoned morning and afternoon sessions. Testimony by Government witness was still incomplete last night. Another brief hearing will be given this morning shortly before the House considers a motion to call up the bill. A strong movement has developed in the committee to make modifying changes, which can be presented on the House floor as committee amendments. During a closed session late yesterday the committee reached no agreement on this course, but decided to consider eleventh-hour changes at the special meeting this morning.

Representative Colmer (Democrat) of Mississippi, in charge of the House rule on the labor bill, told reporters he will ask immediate consideration in the House today regardless of whether the committee proposes modifications. Colmer said he personally will offer an amendment to tighten the bill by providing criminal penalties for "conspiracy" to strike in any war industry.

A fight to defeat the rule, and thus block House consideration of the measure, has been promised by a group of Republicans led by Representative Fish (Republican) of New York.

War officials, who had opposed enactment of several sections of the measure on the grounds they would stimulate industrial unrest and thus hamper war production, followed Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins

Senate Blocks Coalition Drive On Trade Pacts

Final Passage of Bill Permitting Extension Is Expected Today

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Two decisive Senate votes yesterday broke the back of a bipartisan drive to place restrictions on the Administration's reciprocal trade program and cleared the way for two-year extension of the law without amendments.

Final Senate passage of the unamended bill was expected today after a last but apparently futile coalition effort to subject trade agreements to Senate ratification.

Administration victory was assured when the Senate yesterday rejected a Republican-supported committee amendment permitting Congress to end the agreements six months after the war's end. The vote was 51 to 33.

A second attempt to change the act by subjecting all future trade agreements to congressional approval was similarly defeated, 50 to 31.

The last unsuccessful amendment, by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, was one of two changes individually sponsored by Democrats to provide some form of Congressional review of the trade pacts.

Another amendment by Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, will not reach a vote until today, but was obviously doomed by the overwhelming defeat dealt the O'Mahoney and Republican proposals. Maloney's amendment would treat trade agreements as treaties and require Senate ratification by a two-thirds vote.

Rejection of yesterday's two test attempts at modification was a personal victory for Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who fathered the reciprocal trade program and vigorously opposed any change during the war period.

Hull argued throughout that any wartime restrictions on the power to freely negotiate mutually beneficial trade agreements with other

Senate Slated To Pass Tax Bill Today

Quick Action Seen As House Approves Compromise Act

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Senate passage is slated today for the pay-as-you-go tax bill which the House overwhelmingly indorsed yesterday, and the measure will probably reach the President for signing tomorrow.

Friends and foes of the compromise tax plan abating 75 per cent of a tax year for most individuals, and a whole year for those with a tax of $50 or less, predicted that the Senate's indorsement would be voted by a comparatively larger margin than the 256-to-114 House decision.

House passage came after members heard that Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas had been assured by President Roosevelt that he intends to sign the bill.

Rapid-fire routing of the tax bill through the last two steps of the legislative routine, in contrast to bitter political battling that accompanied it for four months, was receiving only token opposition. Leaders were intent on making sure that the new withholding levy for collecting income taxes along with Victory taxes from wage and salary earners could be started the first of next month, and to do that the bill needed passing this week.

A few House members protested against passage yesterday, and a few Senators will do the same to-

Way to Free World From Want Mapped by Food Conference

(Text on Page 18.)

By Wade Werner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Hot Springs, Va., June 1.—The draft of a declaration of principles, confidently setting forth the belief that the goal of freedom from want can be achieved by all peoples, was completed today and approved at a meeting of the combined sections of the United Nations Food Conference.

It stresses that the first task of the United and Associated Nations is to win the war and "deliver millions of people from hunger." After that, there must be concerted efforts to win and maintain freedom from fear and freedom from want.

The declaration emphasizes that "the primary responsibility lies with each nation for seeing that its own people have the food needed for health and life," but adds that "each nation can fully achieve its goal only if all work together."

Accompanying the declaration is a resolution recommending that the participating governments embody in a formal declaration "to their own people and to one another" a pledge to collaborate in raising the standards of nutrition and living standards of their peoples.

The resolution also recommends establishment of a permanent organization of the United Nations in the field of food and agriculture, and provides for an interim commission to carry forward the work of the food conference and formulate plans for permanent organization.

Washington is suggested as the place where the interim commission shall be installed "not later than July 15, 1943." The resolution provides that each of the participating nations shall be entitled to a representative on the commission.

Earlier, the combined sections of the conference approved a series of eight resolutions recommending national and international action toward achievement of world abundance and the conquest of hunger and poverty.

The eight resolutions, which now need only routine approval by a plenary session to give them the weight of conference recommendations, stress that improvement of the living standards of any nation is primarily a national problem which must be met primarily by national measures. They point also, however, to the possibility of accelerating progress through international action.

Resolution No. 4 recommends:

"That the governments and authorities here represented accept the responsibility for making it possible, so far as it is within their

Peyrouton's Resignation Is Accepted by Gen. De Gaulle

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Algiers (Wednesday), June 2.—Marcel Peyrouton, the Giraud-appointed governor general of Algeria, in a surprise development offered his resignation to Gen. Charles de Gaulle and it was promptly accepted, it was announced last night.

The action climaxed a day when disagreements were reported still plaguing the French unity conference.

In his gesture for unity, Peyrouton at his own request became an infantry captain to prove his willingness to fight for the liberation of France.

De Gaulle, riding high on the crest of popular ovations organized by his supporters, thus got rid of one of those he disliked by snapping up his offer and appointing him to the De Gaullist army of the Middle East.

An exchange of letters between Peyrouton, onetime Vichy cabinet minister, and de Gaulle, whom he addressed as "president of the executive committee," was made public last night.

It was not immediately clear why Peyrouton should have addressed de Gaulle, rather than the new joint council of Gen. Henri Giraud, who not only is the man who appointed him to the Algeria post, but his military chief as well. Dispatches Monday said de Gaulle and Giraud would be joint presidents of the new governing body for France, taking turns at presiding, but with all official actions to be taken by

Some Owners Spurn Any Compromise For Temporary Peace, Ickes Says

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes was disclosed yesterday to have narrowed differences between the United Mine Workers and some coal operators on portal-to-portal pay to 50 cents a day, but the general strike nevertheless continued into its second day.

Only a handful of coal was mined in the United States yesterday as wrangling and mutual recriminations characterized continuing collective bargaining conferences.

Barring an unforeseen last minute development, the virtually complete shutdown was expected to continue through a second day in spite of an order from Ickes to John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, "to cause the members of the U. M. W. to return to their wartime posts of duty."

Emphasizes Nature of Crisis

In a joint message to both miners and operators, Ickes, Government operator of the mines, placed emphasis on the unprecedented nature of the crisis facing the Government by terming it "a strike against the Government."

The Associated Press estimated that upward of 500,000 miners were on strike.

The War Labor Board took no action yesterday, but it was expected to refer the matter to the President "for such action as he deems appropriate" if the strike continues.

The status of negotiations was revealed to reporters after the bargaining conference opened its doors to newsmen to permit both sides to make statements.

Lewis disclosed that he had offered to settle the dispute by accepting a temporary payment of $1.50 a day increase while a commission of experts determined the actual amount due under the portal-to-portal demand.

Formula Suggested by Ickes

The formula calling for a temporary payment but not the amount to be paid was suggested by Ickes at a Monday night conference with the mine leader and Charles O'Neill, spokesman for the northern coal operators, but later rejected by the operators, Lewis said.

Informed sources revealed, however, that O'Neill had suggested a temporary payment of $1 a day in conferences with Ickes, but was later unable to get his plan endorsed by all operators. Both sides also revealed differences over the question of retroactivity with the miners contending that any permanent increase should be applied retroactively to April 1, but the operators calling for an end to present liability for back pay.

Lewis had previously insisted on a $2 a day increase figured as payment for 90 minutes at time and a half. The operators had offered to negotiate on the basis of payment for 48 minutes which would provide an 80 cents a day boost at straight time rates. Concessions already ordered by WLB are estimated to total 25 cents a day.

Meanwhile, Ickes acted to conserve existing supplies of coal by barring deliveries of railroad-borne coal to consumers with more than 10 days' supply of bituminous or five days' supply of anthracite.

Nationwide Dimout May Come

The action—virtually freezing coal stocks in railroad cars—was expected to conserve three million tons of fuel. However, officials doubted that they could maintain it in effect because of the serious disruption to rail transportation that might result.

Further action which would bring the effects of the stoppage into every home also was "on the books," including a Nation-wide dimout of outdoor lighting and a deep slash in rail passenger car mileage.

Steel industry sources were gloomy about the prospects of weathering a stoppage of any length, stating that production of steel for war would be seriously

Chinese Push Ahead On 300-Mile Front

Fierce Allied Air Assault Drives Japs From Skies

By Spencer Moosa
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking, China, June 1.—The Chinese, expanding one of their greatest victories of the war, were thrusting forward tonight over a great central China front, enveloping Japanese troops falling back in north Hunan Province and annihilating a Japanese regiment and additional mixed calvary and engineering forces which had sought to cover the enemy's retreat in southern Hupeh Province.

The invader, suffering as well from extraordinary powerful Allied air action which was officially declared to have driven him from the sky over the Hunan-Hupeh frontier region, was being thrust back generally along a 300-mile arc running from the Tungting Lake region of northern Hunan westward around the main Japanese base at Ichang and then northeastward to the Hupeh-Honan border area.

Five Jap Divisions Knocked Out

Southwest of Ichang, five Japanese divisions earlier had been declared "completely routed"—fatally encircled and erased as a military force.

Following up this initial major triumph, a communique of the Chinese command announced:

"In southern Hupeh, the enemy's 116th Regiment and a portion of the mixed cavalry and engineering units covering the retreat of the Thirteenth (Japanese) Division were surrounded by our forces at Lishutang, 6 miles east of Yuyangkwan, and completely annihilated. The Chinese troops captured an immense quantity of war supplies."

It was added that enemy remnants had been "thoroughly mopped up" west of Ichang and that the Japanese there were "facing further encircling assaults."

"In north Hunan, Japanese troops who retreated toward Wangchichang have been surrounded and the battle of annihilation is proceeding."

Planes Inflict Heavy Toll

The Chinese-Allied (American) air forces were said by Chiang Kai-shek's command to have been in strong, unending action along the Hupeh-Hunan border, having "inflicted immense damage on the enemy."

"The enemy's air strength," the communique went on, "thus has been greatly reduced and his planes practically made no appearance today."

The Chinese were spurred on by Gen. Hsueh Yueh, "the little tiger" and hero of the three battles in which the Japanese failed to take Changsha, capital of Hunan Province. He was said to have ordered his veteran troops on the north Hunan front "to die fighting rather than return humiliated."

It was said he told his generals he did not want to see them again if they had to return in defeat.

Only in Shansi Province, well to the north of the Hunan-Hupeh action, was any Japanese progress reported, and even there it was at high cost. There the Japanese were said to have hurled more than 10,000 reinforcements into a counter-attack west of the Taiheng Mountains. An enemy advance against violent resistance was conceded, but 800 Japanese casualties were reported during the day.

U. S.-British Invasion Threat May Prevent German Summer Drive Against Russians

By E. C. Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 1.—A growing feeling was evident today that Germany, suffering from such wounds as those of Stalingrad and Tunisia, is reluctant to risk a new summer offensive in Russia while the British-American threat is poised.

That feeling was supported by the inferential acknowledgment of the Nazi commentator that Hitler had lost the initiative, but there was some suspicion that German propaganda might be at work in all this.

As the London Star put it, Stalin himself "believes that the enemy plans yet one more grand assault upon the Red army. We in the west would be wise to take the same line and to remember that Hitler may still be strong enough to strike back at us."

Timidity Among Leaders Indicated

With this qualification, a variety of reports and circumstances suggest timidity and uncertainty among the German leaders.

Advices from creditable sources were that Rumania and Hungary—the Axis satellites have been estimated by Prime Minister Churchill to have at present 28 divisions on the Russian front—were stubbornly resisting further participation in the Russian campaign.

The statement over the Berlin radio of Lieut. Gen. Kurt Dietmar, leading Nazi military commentator, that "Those who must attack are our opponents and not ourselves."

The emerging fact—conceded during the day by a high Spanish official presumably friendly to the Axis—that Axis submarines had failed to halt that Allied sea traffic which would be essential to European invasion.

War Already Won, Moscow Says

Through Dietmar and the neutral press the Germans were presented as an army standing on the defensive through 1943. Limited German aggressive action—in the nature perhaps of a "defensive offensive" intended to anticipate the real thing by the Russians—was seen as one likely course.

(In this connection the Moscow radio in a broadcast to the German people which was recorded in the United States by Government monitors declared that Hitler's war machine was "reeling and tottering" and about to be "crushed and destroyed forever."

(Moscow declared that the Allied air offensive actually had already won the air war, and added: "The purpose of this gigantic air offensive is plain enough. It heralds the invasion of the Continent.")

Invasion Fleet Reported at Rock

whether this fleet sailed into the Mediterranean or the Atlantic.

It was recalled that similar ship concentrations at Gibraltar had been reported in the weeks immediately preceding the invasion of North Africa.

Nazi broadcasts saying the Allied command had picked June 22 as invasion date, meanwhile were disputed by implication today by the Rome radio. An Italian commentator aid the Allies are not likely to announce the invasion date in advance, but he admitted that the heavy aerial blasting of Italy and her island outposts indicates that Allied landings "cannot long be deferred."

Other Rome broadcasts called for a cessation of "quarreling" over responsibility for the Axis disaster in North Africa and exhorted the Italian people to emulate the example of the British people in 1940-41 when they tsood up to bombings and the invasion peril.

A "falling out among thieves," however, seemed to be afflicting the Axis camp. The diplomatic editor of the well-informed British Press Association said Germany was "irritated by a reported Hungarian-Italian secret understanding, mostly concerned with the prospects of peace."

Situated strategically in the Balkan-Danube region, where the Axis has shown fear of a major Allied invasion, Hungary appeared to be balking at further German demands for another Hungarian army on the Russian front.

The British Press Association's diplomatic expert said Hungary "realizes that an Axis victory is no longer possible" and is seeking to "enlist Allied sympathy by a display of courage" in rejecting German demands.

Commons Debate Hits Rivalry in Civil Aviation

By Thomas C. Watson
International News Service Staff Writer

London, June 1.—Warnings against international competition in postwar civilian aviation were uttered by government leaders today in a lively debate in Commons during which one member urged that America be advised the British Empire does not wish to be "pushed off the map."

Responding to expressions of alarm over the present and future of Britain's role in development of the world's airways, Air Secretary Sir Archibald Sinclair and Deputy Prime Minister Maj. Clement Attlee appealed for cooperation rather than rivalry in the matter.

At one point the House rang with noisy protests when Wing Comdr. J. A. C. Wright, (Conservative), declared:

"There should be a conference of the Dominions in order to devise some united organization so that we can tell the United States that the empire is not willing to be pushed off the map, but is willing to cooperate to the fullest with the United States on civil aviation."

Disclosing that consultations with the Dominions and India have already been held, Attlee said:

"The Dominions have agreed with us that we must develop our communications."

The Deputy Premier, however, expressed surprise that "in the midst of war anyone should make civil aviation a priority."

Air Secretary Sinclair decried tendencies that might arouse jealousies between Britain and her Allies regarding civil air services which are expected to constitute a vast field of enterprise after the war."

British Inflict Casualties in Burma

New Delhi, June 1 (AP).—British forces in upper Burma have inflicted considerable casualties on Japanese units in the Chin Hills, about 100 miles from the Burma-India border, a British communique said today.

"During the past ten days," the war bulletin said, "a number of localized encounters have taken place.

"Considerable casualities have been inflicted on the enemy who now are holding positions between Kalemyo and Fort White. Our own losses have been moderate."

United States planes destroyed Japanese administrative headquarters in a heavy attack on Sumprabum yesterday and attacked railways at Mandalay, Monywa and Legyi. Results mainly were obscured by foul weather. An American communique also said fighter bombers made numerous sorties against Japanese ground installations.

The United States operations continued today and "a military food dump at Shingban was among the enemy stores destroyed," the bulletin added. All United States planes returned safely on both days.

WAR LOG OF THE LIBERATOR

DAILY, the war log of the Consolidated Vultee Liberator—huge, 4-engine, long-range American bomber—grows longer.

On all our global battle fronts, formations of these multi-ton bombers are pounding the Axis.

You have only to scan your newspaper headlines to spot reports of the Liberator's work from the Mediterranean to the Aleutians, from Burma to Germany, from the South Pacific to Nazi-occupied Europe.

WAKE ISLAND— Liberators in 2000-mile round trip drop 24,000 pounds of bombs on Jap-held Wake Island.

NORTH PACIFIC— Liberator bombers blast Jap-held Kiska in 13 raids, score hits on ships, runways, and camp areas.

SOLOMON ISLANDS— Liberators drop heaviest load of 2000-lb. block busters ever to hit Rabaul. Large fires seen for miles.

BURMA— Liberators bomb Rangoon railroad yards, dump over 30,000 pounds of bombs. Another formation drops 60,000 pounds on oil refinery at Syriam and Jap-held mines at Namtu.

NORTH AFRICA— Liberators, maintaining a "shuttle bombing service," pound Nazi's Mareth positions in more than 500 sorties.

GERMANY— Large formation of Liberators bombs Wilhelmshaven for third time in one of heaviest attacks of war.

FRANCE— Liberators pound Nazi U-Boat pens at Brest and Lorient, start fires, hit power station. More than a score of enemy fighter planes destroyed.

SOUTH PACIFIC— South Pacific Command announces Liberators being used to replace other warplanes, because of longer range and heavier bomb-load . . . waves of Liberators join in aerial attack on huge Jap convoy, disable all 10 of its warships, all 12 transports, wipe out 15,000 troops, down 82 Jap planes. Liberators attack New Guinea base, set fires—destroy 23 Jap planes.

ITALY— Liberators resume round-the-clock pounding of harbor at Naples, score direct hits. * Fifty Liberators drop 250,000 pounds of bombs on harbor installations and merchant ships at Reggio di Calabria, at "toe" of Italy.

SICILY— Fifty U. S. Liberators, escorted by RAF fighters, bomb shipping in Augusta harbor. Twenty vessels hit.

MIDDLE EAST— During past six months, long-range Liberators based in this area engaged in more than 5000 separate sorties totaling over 21,000 flying hours. They dropped more than 8,500,000 pounds of bombs, definitely sank 49 enemy ships, probably sank 25 others, damaged an additional 28. They definitely destroyed 99 enemy aircraft, probably destroyed 41 others, damaged a total of 59.

CHINA— Liberators arrive to form new heavy bombardment group for Fourteenth Air Force, give it weapons of longer range, deadlier fire power . . . Liberators raid Jap bases at Canton, drop 80,000 pounds of bombs on airport installations.

SUCH REPORTS, selected at random, highlight the job being done by the Consolidated Vultee Liberator—formidable 4-engine bomber.

Foggia Raided For 3d Time In Four Days

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 1.—Italy's Foggia airdrome, where Mayor LaGuardia of New York and other well known Americans trained in the last war, was given its third heavy pounding in four days yesterday by American Flying Fortresses. Other United States bombers continued their terrific assault on the island outposts of Sardinia and Pantelleria.

Flying unescorted to the aviation and railway center, 80 miles northeast of Naples and on the far side of the Italian peninsula, the Fortresses blanketed the airdrome with bombs.

"Large numbers of enemy aircraft were destroyed on the ground," the official announcement said, although it gave no exact figure in keeping with the air command's new policy. Photographs showed that two hangars and barracks were damaged severely.

The Fortresses also blasted railroad facilities, leaving freight yards, stations, boxcars and warehouses a mass of tangled wreckage.

This attack by the Flying Fortresses of Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's Strategic Air Force followed Sunday's destructive raid on Foggia by more than 50 Liberator bombers of the Middle East Command, a force considerably larger than the one which battered the airdrome last Friday.

"There must have been 25 Junkers on the field," said Lieut. Marion D. Jones, a navigator from Memphis, Tenn. "Rows of bombs criss-crossing the field looked like a bunch of weeds in a cornpatch."

As usual of late, the attackers of both the islands and the mainland encountered little opposition. The Americans shot down four enemy planes, two of them at Foggia, and lost only two of their own craft in the day's operations.

"The only fighters I saw were off in the distance," said Lieut. John J. Hanley of St. Paul, Minn., a pilot on the Foggia raid.

An official announcement, meanwhile, said the confirmed score for destruction of enemy aircraft in May was 337 planes shot down in combat, compared with an Allied loss of 108.

Since Foggia is the first major target in eastern Italy to be attacked by bombers of Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz' Northwest African Air Command, the raid marked a widening of the Allied offensive operations.

Waves of Marauders, Mitchells, Warhawks and Lightnings kept up the aerial siege of Pantelleria, striking at the main defenses of the tiny island, while bomb-carrying Lightnings made a series of attacks on Sardinia.

Several bombs hit the Cantarina power station on Sardinia. At Porto Ponte de Romano a 400-foot merchant ship was blown apart. The Lightnings scored hits on a factory, a power transformer and barracks at Guspini and dropped bombs among small boats at Cagliari.

(An Italian communique, broadcast by Rome, said "considerable damage" was done at Foggia and listed 27 persons as killed and 33 injured. It said that Augusta in Sicily also was bombed yesterday and that damage still was "being assessed" at Cagliari.

(The Italians claimed that 20 Allied planes were shot down in yesterday's raids and told of an Axis attack on Sousse Harbor during which fires were set.

(The Berlin radio said the "City of Olbia on the Island of Sardinia was completely destroyed" in a raid Sunday.)

A Midle East communique from Cairo today said long-range Allied fighters made sweeps off the west coast of Greece Sunday.

Tupi May Be Taught In U. of Brazil

Rio de Janeiro (AP).—The National Council for Protection of the Indians, in a letter to President Getulio Vargas, has urged establishment of a course in Tupi, language of many Brazilian Indians, at the University of Brazil in Rio de Janeiro. The council said Tupi is being taught in the Universities of Sao Paulo and of Bahi. Tupi is spoken very little now, as the Indians have been assimilated by the Portuguese-speaking population of Brazil.

Red Thrusts Bring Death To 1000 Nazis

By the Associated Press

London, (Wednesday) June 2 (AP). Thrusts by air, artillery, and ground troops sparked action on the Russian Front Tuesday, bringing death to nearly 1000 Germans, the Soviet midnight communique reported today, while a news broadcast told of sharp engagements in the Caucasus in which Nazi counterattacks were beaten back.

The communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor here, said simply that "fighting continues" northeast of Novorossisk in the Causasus, but a Tass agency broadcast declared that several charges by German infantry and Tommy-gunners were smashed there with "heavy losses" to the enemy.

Fierce fighting still was flaring at the German Kuban foothold, but its scale was not disclosed.

The German radio, in a report of Monday fighting in the Kuban, said a village was captured from the Russians in the eastern sector and held against Russian counterattacks, while "German Stukas all day long attacked Soviet reserves and batteries."

A Moscow broadcast early today said Russian fliers shot down 11 of 24 German planes which attempted to raid the town of Shchigry in the Kursk region Tuesday. "We lost one plane, but the pilot is safe," the broadcast said.

Four hundred Germans were killed in fighting west of Moscow, said the Soviet midnight war bulletin. In the Lisichansk area 125 miles southeast of Kharkov, the communique continued, "our troops annihilated nearly a company of Hitlerites," and wrecked fortifications.

The noon communique had reported repulses of two strong counterattacks by the enemy in this area Monday night.

Mortar gunners wiped out a company of Germans concentrating south of Balakleya, 45 miles southeast of Kharkov, the late war bulletin said, while Soviet planes and ships in the Black Sea and Gulf of Finland "sank three enemy mortar barges, one motor torpedo boat and a transport ship."

U. S. Bombers Again Raid Lae Heavily

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters In Australia (Wednesday) June 2.—Liberators dropped 36 tons of bombs on Lae yesterday, duplicating the tonnage hurled on that New Guinea base the day before, the high command announced.

The raiding was made during daylight hours. There was no interception, and the raiders lost no planes.

Above Lae on the Huon Peninsula at Finschhafen, a Flying Fortress shot down five and possibly six of 16 Japanese fighters which attacked. Three members of the crew were wounded and the bomber was badly damaged but it got back to its base safely. This was the largest number of attackers sent against a Fortress without shooting it down in this theater.

Lae, which has a big airdrome, now has taken 100 tons of bombs within less than a week. It is only 20 miles above Salamaua toward which Allied ground troops have been infiltrating from the south to positions within less than 15 miles of the latter town.

In addition to the three raids on Lae, Allied planes over the past weekend dropped 13 tons of bombs on its feeder base, Wewak, to the northwest.

At Madang, another supply base for Lae, long range fighters strafed the coastal aera, today's communique reported.

In the sector northwest of Australia, a single 4-engined bomber made the long flight of more than 1000 miles to bomb the airdrome at Kendari, Dutch Celebes.

At Ambonia Island, in the Banda Sea, some 600 miles above Australia, medium bombers attacked Laha airdrome.

Japs Trying Submarine Drive On Far Pacific Supply Lines

By the Associated Press

An Advanced South Pacific Base, May 31 (Delayed).—The Japanese apparently are persisting in an attempt to develop a German-style submarine offensive against the long Allied shipping routes to the South and Southwest Pacific war theaters, informed sources here believe.

The past week the Japanese broadcast their second report within a month on asserted ship sinkings by their underseas raiders in the South Pacific.

The enemy said it had sunk 13 Allied ships, including 5 transports, between May 5 and May 24. This was called on exaggeration by a spokesman at South Pacific headquarters.

The spokesman said the enemy report of sinking five transports was completely false. He acknowledged, however, that some Allied ships were torpedoed by Japanese U-boats in May.

Acknowledgement of the enemy attacks on Allied merchant shipping suggested a significant shift by the Japanese in their use of underseas craft. The Nipponese previously had concentrated their submarines almost entirely against warships in this sector.

Cargo vessels in the Pacific had been notably free from submarine attack.

Although the loss of any American merchantman adds to the serious Allied shipping problem in the South Pacific, the headquarters spokesman indicated that the enemy is not succeeding in developing the U-boat campaign to a scale of startegical importance.

Informed observers believe that the persisting lull in fleet action since conclusion of the Guadalcanal campaign has enabled the Japanese to shift their submarine strength.

Presbyterians Vote Protest on Catholics

By the Associated Press

Montreat, N. C., June 1.—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, acting upon an overture which alleged there was "evidence of an attempt on the part of the Roman Catholic Church to undermine the work of Protestant missions in South America" voted today to file a protest with the State Department.

The overture was sent up by the Memphis Presbytery. It was adopted without debate or show of opposition in the assembly.

As approved, the protest to the State Department said in part:

"In the highly delicate situation that faces us in the world, calling for the utmost unity among freedom-loving people of this hemisphere, the Roman Catholic hierarchy has indeed taken upon itself a grave responsibility in introducing the divisive elements of sectarianism, bigotry, and religious intolerance.

"Lovers of democracy everywhere will be shocked at this open-handed effort to gain ecclesiastical advantage at the expense of the very principles for which free men are fighting. On the principle expressed by the hierarchy, Roman Catholics ought to be suppressed in the United States, seeing it is predominantly Protestant."

The assembly represents the Southern branch of the Presbyterian Church covering the territory from Virginia to Texas.

OF ALL PLACES
IT WOULD HAPPEN HERE

SOMEONE has said that a man is entitled to make three embarrassing mistakes in his lifetime.

It would appear that we have made one of ours—and in Washington, of all places, and in all times.

We see nothing for it but to make a clean breast of the whole thing—and convey our most sincere apologies to all parties concerned.

In this week's June 5th issue of The Saturday Evening Post there is an article on Eugene Meyer entitled, "Squire of Washington" by Marquis W. Childs (an article incidentally that should not escape the attention of any Washingtonian—mistake or no mistake). In it there is a picture of Cissy Patterson. Although stated correctly in the body of the article, the caption under the picture makes the error of calling her the owner of the Washington Star—when any printer's devil knows it to be the Times Herald.

We could say that these things just happen in getting out three and a half million magazines every week—and let it go at that.

We could do an essay on the frailties of human nature.

But the book is printed and on the newsstands. The story is a good one. The mistake is as embarrassing to us as to those directly concerned—and our faces are very red.

Unfinished Jap Airfield Lacked Bulldozers, Yanks Learn on Attu

By William L. Worden
Associated Press Staff Writer

Holtz Bay, Attu, May 19 (Delayed).—One of the mysteries of Attu was solved today as American troops had their first opportunity to examine, without danger of enemy fire, the airfield Japanese have been building here for months and months.

This is a 1000-yard strip with one end at the bay shore, the other end up in the tundra. It varies in width from 100 feet to 100 yards and still has no suitable surface for airplanes.

Trucks, rollers and caterpillar tractors abandoned on it were visible from a distance and I was puzzled about why it hadn't been finished until I stepped on the strip itself. Then I saw that despite trucks; despite the fact the Japanese had gone to the trouble to import more than a mile of light steel rails and mine-type dirt cars to run on them, they still hadn't used mechanical engineering aids.

There wasn't a sign of a bulldozer. A drainage ditch several miles long and a dozen feet deep had been laboriously dug with narrow shovels. Shovels also were used to cut into heavy tundra and to load cars which then were pushed to parts of the field where filling was needed.

Vehicles Wrecked

No wonder it still is not finished. Engineering officers swear it could be made ready for use in five days with modern equipment.

All but one of the abandoned vehicles had been wrecked by shellfire or bombing. Mechanics say some "probably are repairable, but the Japanese apparently never had time. The trucks are right-hand-drive jobs, with bulb-type klaxons.

A typical piece of Japanese cleverness was evident in wide steel rings made to fit around dual tires. Thus fitted, trucks became rollers to aid in packing landing strip surfaces.

Japanese workmen apparently had not been on eight-hour days. Their shacks were stuck in gulleys alongside and field rations were right there so they wouldn't have to stop working long to eat.

The booty in the Holtz area included numerous guns and vehicles and a huge pile of foods and ammunition which the Japanese abandoned.

The valley contained enough food to keep the attacking force eating comfortably for months. It doubtless would have lasted the Japanese at least a year, a fact which contrasts oddly with previous estimates that the Japanese on Attu were in danger of being starved out.

United States Army assault troops captured the field two days ago, driving the Japanese from the last pockets of resistance in the entire Holtz Bay area and opening the way for an assault on the passes connecting Holtz and Massacre Bays and leading down into Chichagof Harbor.

The air field fell to a comparatively small American force, which had driven, in six days, more than six miles across two mountain ridges and two separate valleys in the face of punishing Japanese machine-gun, rifle and antiaircraft-gun fire.

Named Hartl Beach

The landing for the drive which took the field was made on a beach west of Holtz Bay, where the Japanese apparently figured there was no danger. It has been dubbed Hartl Beach by Col. Frank Culin of Tucson, Ariz., in honor of Maj. Albert V. Hartl, Bismarck, N. Dak., who led the advance forces in the attack.

Short range dueling with rifles and pistols marked the final stretch to the airfield after the Americans had overcome the formidable obstacle of terrain and laboriously prepared Japanese defense emplacements.

The demoralized Japanese made one last stand on top of a ridge. One platoon tried a counterattack which ended with all 40 Japanese dead.

The airfield was in American hands.

Fighting troops had been quartered across the valley in an odd conglomeration of filthy tents and still more filthy dugouts and caves. A typical barracks in a cave hada dirt floor and a tiny stove at the exact center. On each side wooden platforms do for beds. A section for each man is rudely marked, but otherwise unseparated. At each man's head was a packing box cupboard where most of them had a few pills, some writing paper and trinkets.

One particular set of postcards with line drawings of Japanese victory scenes and homeland landscapes apparently was issued to officers and men. Underneath each man's section of platform he stored his old gear, much of it mildewed.

Over his head might be a few cutouts or a few drawings obviously done by children at home in Japan. In each hut would be at least one opened wooden bucket of rice, one bucket of slightly putrid fish. A man in the field carries a bean bag size sack of dry rice and usually has cooked rice in the bottom of his mess kit with perhaps fish or kelp stew in the top.

Court Refuses to Review Teachers' Case

Three teachers of the northern Illinois State Teachers College at DeKalb, who contended they were victims of a campaign by the president of the school to "get rid of all teachers who would not bend the knee," failed yesterday to obtain a Supreme Court review.

The teachers—Miss Blanche Davidson, dean of women, Carl C. Cramer and Frank W. Phillips—said they were dismissed in July, 1941, by the president of the school and his action was upheld by the Teachers College Board of the State of Illinois.

converging of the three-pronged American attack apparently meant that all of the enemy had been wiped out in this region.

"Small Japanese groups offered weak resistance" to this last United States drive, the Navy said, with over 400 of the Nipponese being killed Saturday night and Sunday morning. The only remaining Japanese pocket of resistance now remaining is in the area further to the east, around Cape Khebnikof.

Meanwhile, American Army planes renewed their attack on the Japanese base on Kiska Island, which is east of Attu and now outflanked by our possession of the latter island.

Liberator and Mitchell bombers, accompanied by Warhawk fighters, pounded Kiska Sunday, the communique said, setting fires at enemy installations on Gertrude Cove, the airfield runway, the camp area and a beached ship.

New Doctor Called As Ill Wife Halts Dempsey Trial

White Plains, N. Y., June 1 (AP). Jack Dempsey's attorney announced today that he had engaged a White Plains neurologist to examine Mrs. Hannah Williams Dempsey as a postponement was granted in the divorce suit of the former heavyweight boxing champion against his wife who is reported to be ill.

The postponement was granted until tomorrow afternoon when Mrs. Dempsey's physician is scheduled to take the stand to testify in person on her condition. Mrs. Dempsey's attorney read in court a telegram from Dr. William Friedman of New York, saying that Mrs. Dempsey suffered "from a complete nervous breakdown" and suggesting that she be confined to bed for the next week.

Referee J. Addison Young agreed to the proposal of Arthur F. Driscoll, Dempsey's attorney, for another doctor to examine Mrs. Dempsey. Driscoll then engaged Dr. William M. Kelly.

Yank's Ruse Traps Jap Entrenched In Snow Foxhole

Holtz Bay, Attu Island, May 20 (Delayed) (AP).—Castner's Cutthroats, the Alaskan Scouts trained by Col. Lawernce V. Castner, spotted a Japanese in a foxhole on the side of a snow slope.

It was a deep foxhole and well protected. Repeatedly the scouts tried to get him from below but failed. Finally, they went above him and again failed in attempts to shoot or grenade him. So they used strategy.

One scout took a canvas shelter half, spread it out on the snow, sat on it, pulled the front end up between his legs.

Other scouts gave him a good push. He went sliding merrily down the snow, very fast and very close to the Jap's hole. As he went by he dropped a grenade in the hole and was himself well down the slope out of danger before the grenade went off.

Additional Grant Sought as Bids for Nursery Fail

An additional $15,000 grant from the Federal Works Agency for the renovation of houses in the 400 block of D Street Southeast to be used for day shelter for the children of working mothers was sought by the District yesterday, as contractors still failed to bid within the amounts granted.

The lowest bid opened was for $24,100, which was made by the R. F. Bell Construction Co. of Hyattsville. The next lowest bids were from John Tester & Sons of the District for $24,686, and the Prince Georges Construction Co., Landover, Md., for $25,358.

Of the $14,700 advanced by the FWA, for the day centers, $8900 is for repairs and alterations, leaving less than $6000 for the construction work. Since the District once before refused to meet higher bids and readvertised with no success, it was decided that more money must be obtained for the purpose.

Wallet Clew Discounted In Slaying

experts and members of the Loudoun County sheriff's office were investigating the slayings. Lieut. Jeremiah Flaherty and Detective Sergt. Richard Felber were ordered to the scene by Acting Chief of Detectives Robert Barrett.

Love was the son of the late Fenton Love, former member of the Virginia House of Delegates, and his 300-acre farm is considered one of the best in the county. He was a member of the Loudoun County Ration Board, taught a Bible class at Harmony Methodist Church and was known as one of the civic leaders of the county.

The bodies were discovered by Worth T. Blevens, a patent medicine salesman, about 11 a. m. Blevens had been at the home of Fenton L. Piggott, Love's first cousin, who owns a farm three-quarters of a mile from the Love farm down the back road between Hamilton and Purcellville.

Saw Gate Unlatched

Blevens told police that he had seen a car drive out of the Love farm's half-mile-long lane, stop, an occupant alight and unlatch the gate and drive away. He said the car and its occupant were too far away for him to identify either.

Blevens said he went through the open gate and up to the front door. No one answered his ring. Walking to the side porch he discovered the body of Love in a pool of blood. Investigating further, he found the bodies of Mrs. Love and James inside the house. He notified Loudoun County Sheriff S. P. Alexander, who discovered the other two bodies.

Here was the scene at the murder house as police began their investigation:

A. Morris Love, seated in the armchair on the side porch of his home, where he always sat in fine weather after a meal. His head was bashed in and a piece of bed ticking thrown over the body.

His son, James Love, shot in the heart and his skull crushed, dining room.

Mrs. Love, shot to death in the dining room, where investigation showed she may have tried to struggle to a telephone.

Walter Russell, behind the barn 150 yards from the house, with a 22. caliber rifle bullet in the head and a crushed skull. A 22. caliber rifle recently shot was found beside him.

Mrs. Russell, shot in the heart, and head in the doorway of the tenant home which faces the barn and is about 300 yards from the house.

Some neighbors who were said to have arrived at the Love farm before police officers were reported confined to the premises after officers threw a cordon of men about the house and outer fields. No one was allowed closer to the house than the end of the lane, half a mile away.

The bodies were removed from the farm early last night and taken to an undisclosed mortuary in Leesburg for an autopsy.

Though unofficial theories were burning across Loudoun County like wildfire, the murder-suicide conclusion was the least popular. Loudoun folks said Russell had been a good tenant who paid his bills and was a steady worker.

Only immediate survivor of the Love family was Sarah, 22, a daughter who teaches school at Aldie, Va. She had been with her parents and brother Sunday. Last night she was in a state of collapse at the home of Mercer Love, brother of A. Morris, on his farm, also near Purcellville. Two other brothers, Ernest, an official of the Riggs National Bank in New York, and Oscar, a banker in Albuquerque, N. Mex., were believed to be on the way to the scene of the tragedy last night.

The small caliber rifle found by the body of Russell was examined closely by District and local police. Meanwhile, it was learned that police were searching for a former convict known to have been in the neighborhood recently.

Had No Known Enemies

Neighbors said the sizeable check to Love found in Russell's pocket probably was for some corn he had sold recently. Belief that robbery might have been the motive, however, was heightened by neighbors' reports that Love and members of his family had no known enemies and were generally liked and respected.

Arthur Leroy Morris, 38, a brother of Mrs. Russell, arrived at the Love farm late yesterday and told reporters he had been to see his sister Sunday. She and her husband were in the best of spirits, he said.

James Love was the last member of the murdered five seen alive. He had gone into Purcellville late Monday night and had visited friends. His motorcyvle was still at the entrance of the lane approach to the Love farm last night, where he had parked it when he came home.

Blevens, who discovered the bodies, was able to throw additional light on the tragedy last night, as he told reporters that near the body of Russell and the .22 rifle was the stock of another rifle, apparently new and of the same make as the whole weapon.

This, he conjectured, may have been the bludgeoning weapon.

Blevens also revealed that when the car stopped at the end of the Love farm lane, the person who alighted got out on the right side, but got back in on the left side, indicating there may have been two persons involved and that there had been a switch in drivers at that point.

Cousin Takes Charge of Stock

Worth Piggott, neighbor and cousin of Love, and brother of Dr. Burr Piggott, prominent Washington physician, was taking care of Love's stock last night. That included an abundance of cattle, several hundred white Leghorn chickens, several score hogs and a well-tended vegetable garden in addition to the many wheat, corn and oat fields that spread over the rolling acres in the short hills of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The Loudoun countryside was still agog at close to midnight last night and "Loudoun's biggest murder" was the only topic of conversation. The most recent murder to make the headlines in that section was the robbery-slaying of Ward Loveless, 51-year-old Washington and Leesburg attorney, November 24, 1941.

Loveless surprised two youths robbing hs home and was shot in the back three times in a struggle that ended when they pushed him in a closet and shoved a sideboard in front of it. The two 16-year-old boys, Herbert Porter of Brentwood, Md., and Paul B. Hoback of Bluefield, W. Va., were apprehended a few days later and were sentenced to life imprisonment after pleading guilty.

Defense Gear Loaded on Trucks Reviewed in D. C.

A caravan of five Elite Laundry trucks and one city refuse truck and trailer, all loaded with civilian defense skid pumps, passed in review in front of the District Building yesterday to see which arrangement of loading the pumps and coils of hose would be most efficient.

After deliberation the Commissioners and civilian defense chiefs decided that the truck that had the pump and hose on the inside and on the running boards was best, and henceforth all of the trucks loaned by local merchants for the duration would be so loaded.

At present the civilian defense organization has 27 trucks loaned by Julius Garfinckel, Lansburgh's, Jelleff's and Kann's department stores, Elite Laundry, Holmes Bakery, the Embassy-Fairfax and Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase dairies, the Simon Distributing Co. and the Connecticut Pie Co. These same companies have promised nine more trucks, and six additional ones are being sought.

House Committee Gets Income Tax Inquiry Power

President Roosevelt has signed an executive order giving the House Naval Affairs Committee the right to inspect profits filed since 1939, as part of the committee's investigation of the war effort.

The order, approved by the President May 27, became public yesterday when it was distributed to Internal Revenue Collectors by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

The committee recently concluded an inquiry of war contract brokers and soon will begin hearings on the progress of renegotiating war contracts.

Any information obtained from the returns "which is relative or pertinent to the purpose of the investigation," the order further states, may be submitted to the House of Representatives by the committee.

Court Again Denies Review To Stephan

By Edward H. Higgs
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Supreme Court refused yesterday for the third time to grant a review to Max Stephan, Detroit restaurant owner convicted of treason and sentenced to death for shielding and aiding a German aviator who escaped from a Canadian prison camp.

Stephen, whose appeal from an appellate court had been twice rejected, sought this time to carry his case direct from the Trial Court to the Supreme Court. This, the court held, is not permissible under the judicial code. The court also lifted a stay of execution which it had granted Stephen.

At the same time, Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, Emanuel Weiss and Louis Capone, alleged members of "Murder Inc.," doomed to die for killing a Brooklyn storekeeper, lost their appeal to the Supreme Court.

Find No Basis for Contention

In upholding their convictions the high tribunal ruled that there was nothing to bear out the defendants' contention that they had been denied a fair trial, that the jury was prejudiced or that the trial judge was biased.

The "Murder Inc.," trio awaiting execution at Sing Sing, were convicted of slaying Joseph Rosen in 1936 because he threatened to testify in former District Attorney Thomas Dewey's investigation of rackets in New York. The prosecution charged Buchalter ordered Rosen killed, that Weiss fired the shots, and Capone arranged the escape.

The three contended the trial jury was biased because of "unfair and lurid newspaper publicity," about their case. But Justice Roberts' opinion declared the court was unable to "conclude that a convincing showing of actual bias on the part of the jury . . . is established."

Nor was the court able to find, the opinion said, that the trial judge's rulings and instructions to the jury were "such as to deprive the petitioners of a trial according to the accepted course of legal proceedings."

In another opinion, the court declared unconstitutional an inspection fee which the State of Florida sought to impose on fertilizer distributed by the Federal Government to farmers as part of the Agriculture Department's soil conservation program.

Such a requirement, the court held in an opinion by Justice Reed, is prohibited by constitutional provisions giving Federal laws supremacy over State laws.

Supremacy Clause Cited

"These inspection fees," Justice Reed said, "are laid directly upon the United States. They are money exactions the payment of which, if they are enforceable, would be required before executing a function of Government. Such a requirement is prohibited by the supremacy clause."

The Justice Department said the fertilizer was used to grow legumes which are plowed under and provide nitrogen for the soil, "thereby compensating for the critical shortage of chemical nitrogen for fertilizer purposes because of its extensive use in munitions necessary for the war."

The tribunal also heard arguments on a new challenge of the constitutionality of the 49-cent-per-bushel penalty on wheat produced in excess of AAA quotas. Solicitor General Charles Fahy contended that all the issues had been decided by the court last November 9 in a unanimous opinion sustaining such a tax. Representative Lemke (Republican) of North Dakota challenged the penalty as attorney for a group of farmers in Ohio, Michigan, Kansas and Pennsylvania.

Wage-Hour Decision Stands

In other actions yesterday, the court:

Refused to review a decision that the wage-hour administrator has the right to obtain a subpena from a Federal Court to compel a company to produce records, even prior to determination that the company was subject to the Wage-Hour Act. The ruling by the Second Federal Circuit Court was challenged by the Standard Dredging Corp. of New York.

Ruled in a unanimous decision by Justice Black that the Ninth Federal Circuit Court could review the conviction of a Japanese on charges of remaining in a California area contrary to Army orders, even though the Japanese had merely been placed on probation for five years.

Refused to review a decision dismissing a libel suit charging Representative Dies (Democrat) of Texas with imputing in a book that the magazine Southern Progress of Richmond, Va., was "of Nazi character." J. S. Potts, the publisher, said District of Columbia courts previously had dismissed the suit on the ground Dies' language constituted "fair literary comment."

Review Is Refused

Refused to review a decision that the American Gas and Electric Co. of New York should be classified by the Securities Commission as a subsidiary of Electric Bond & Share Co. in administering the Public Utility Holding Company Act.

Agreed to review a decision sustaining charges by the Justice Department that the Soft-Lite Lens Co., Inc., of New York had violated the Sherman Antitrust Act by a distribution system which was held to produce arbitrary and noncompetitive prices to the public for tinted lenses used in spectacles.

Ruled that the Southern Florida Federal District Court had failed to make sufficient "findings of fact" to determine the fairness of a plan for the reduction of indebtedness, under the Federal Bankruptcy Act, of the Everglades drainage district of Florida.

Rent Too High, OPA Says of District Case

An instance of violation of rent control regulations in which the apartment owner failed to make application to the rent administrator for permission to change the rent ceiling from $58.50 for an unfurnished apartment to $90 per month with furniture was disclosed here yesterday.

Ensign George R. Hall, a native of Cambridge, Ohio, who is stationed in the photographic interpretation office at the Naval Air Station, and his wife moved last Monday into a modest three-room apartment at 1501 Twenty-seventh Street Southeast.

Applications Required

Neighbors of the couple were incensed that the rent had been jumped from $58.50 unfurnished to $90 with furniture. George Marshall, the apartment manager, said that $350 had been paid for the furnishings in the living room, bedroom and dinette.

When the case came to the attention of Robert F. Cogswell, rent control administrator, he said: "The apartment owner should have filed an application form with us, asking for a change in ceiling from the unfurnished to furnished apartment. At the same time, he should have itemized the list of furniture with individual evaluations."

In cases of this type, Cogswell added his office considers whether or not furniture justifies the amount of increase in rent. In the case of Ensign Hall, the administrator said "the raise appears to be out of line with the cost of the furniture, and my office will look into the matter just as soon as a complaint is formally filed with us."

Meanwhile, O. H. Garvin, who with U. S. Randle owns the apartment house, presented their side of the case: "If regulations were violated, it was completely unintentional. I did not know we had to change the ceiling price with the rent administrator. We simply tried to set a fair value on rental of the furniture which amounts to about $1 a day."

OPA Orders Canned Milk Added to Rationed Foods

used on the farm as feed for animals, but the Department of Agriculture is endeavoring to divert some of the supply to human consumption channels.

Milk is particularly needed in diets under rationing, the department has pointed out. The three food nutrients in which civilian diets of 1943 will be deficient, B. A. E. says, are calcium, riboflavin, and niacin.

"Milk products containing nonfat milk solids are by far the most important nutritional sources of the first two," it was declared.

In addition to getting skim milk to consumers, the department is interested in experiments whereby they can be utilized in large quantities for human consumption.

Apple "Honey"!

This year, we're using a new moistening agent in place of glycerine, which is now needed for war duty.

The Eastern Regional Research Laboratory of the U. S. Department of Agriculture developed this moistening agent from pure, fresh apple juice. We call it Apple "Honey."

Sprayed on our choice Old Gold tobaccos, Apple "Honey" penetrates every particle . . . helps keep our tobaccos moist and fresh on their way to you. Apple "Honey" is tasteless—does not change the flavor of Old Golds. In many ways, we think it superior to glycerine.

Lowest In Nicotine
Lowest In Throat-Irritating Tars and Resins

In July, 1942, Old Golds were reported first in unbiased, independent, unsolicited tests of 7 leading brands of cigarettes, made for Reader's Digest. Both before and since this report appeared, thousands upon thousands of smokers changed to Old Golds.

Latakia

In 1941, we added rare flavorful Latakia to our other choice Old Gold tobaccos. Thus, we've naturally seasoned our famous blend—stepped up its flavor—increased the smoking pleasure of millions. Get a pack of Old Golds today! Enjoy the outstanding features of this fine cigarette.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

With the entire country rationed, the Truman Committee has just unearthed the fact that 21 per cent of the Army's food has been thrown away.

However, the Army has now discovered what every housewife knows—that if you count on 10 persons for dinner and only six persons come, there will be food left over.

Distressing thing that it took the Army months of survey and experiment to discover this simple household truth. After hearing stories of wastage, the Quartermaster Corps made a survey at three large posts—Camp Lee, Va.; Fort Knox, Ky., and Fort Benning, Ga. They made the discovery that 21 per cent of the edible food was being thrown away.

Having established that fact, the QMC began a scientific examination of possible causes. They began to ask the question which any housewife would have asked in the first place: Are we preparing more food than is needed?

They discovered the astonishing fact that rations were being issued for everybody on the camp's roster, regardless of whether they were present in camp that day or not. By equally laborious study it was discovered that when soldiers are on week-end leave, they don't come to the mess hall for meals. Especially on pay-day weekends.

Result of the study was that 30 per cent of the wastage was found to be from "excess preparation." Having reached this formal conclusion, the Army took action. The Quartermaster Corps, acting through the Quartermaster Board, "formulated a system which issued one ration for each man actually present eating."

This eliminated the rations previously issued for absentees, and the wastage promptly fell off. The Army could do with a good housewife in every kitchen, but as the next best thing, the Army has now borrowed Miss Mary I. Barber from the Kellogg Co., Battle Creek, Mich., to help save food and prepare better food in Army kitchens. She is bringing about some important changes.

Note: When the Truman Committee looked into this situation, it was told by QMC that the highest percentage of food discarded was of "edible kale"—three-quarters of it ended in the garbage pail. To which Senator Truman responded: "That is a wise survey; that is just the way I feel about it."

Italian Donkey

Winston Churchill left many a fine phrase behind him, but the best was the one on Italy. Talking privately to a graup of Britishers, he outlined the intended program of softening up Italy by a combination of two methods: (1) Continued bombing plus (2) propaganda by radio urging the people that if they would throw over Mussolini, the Allies would not be too hard on them.

"Thus," said Churchill, "we employ both the cudgel and the carrot to budge the donkey."

Ruml Tax Battle

The atmosphere of the final tax conference wasn't nearly so harmonious as Senator Vandenberg of Michigan and other Rumlites let on when they emerged, grinning from ear to ear over their victory in dodging 75 per cent of the Nation's tax bill.

There was a hot flareup just before the closed-door meeting adjourned. Representatives Jere Cooper of Tennessee and John Dingell of Michigan, militant foes of the Ruml plan, protested mightily and served notice they would fight the conference measure on the House floor.

"I'll never sign the conference report," Dingell declared. "This is one of the worst steals ever attempted on the United States Treasury. I would have been willing to agree to a reasonable compromise to break the deadlock here, but I won't be a party to this outrageous bill. It is almost as evil as the Ruml plan itself and will work a terrible hardship on the working classes of America."

Waving his finger at the Rumlites, Dingell continued: "I, for one, am not going to take this lying down. I'm going to speak out on the floor against this unholy product of Wall Street and I'll continue to speak out as long as there's breath in my body. You haven't got me licked."

Dingell was so aroused that Cooper tried several times to quiet him, fearing he might become ill. However, Cooper informed the conference that he enthusiastically indorsed everything his Michigan colleague said, and announced that he, too, would refuse to sign the compromise report.

Good Neighbors in Reverse

U. S. censors have some wax recordings of overseas telephone conversations which will cause red faces in the State Department. When the diplomats play them back they will hear such words as "Those perfumed . . . in the State Department are about as Good Neighbors as Adolf Hitler."

The words came from a Chilean with a Yale accent, Armando Hamell, who did his best to cooperate with the United States and Great Britain in boycotting Axis insurance companies and then got kicked in the pants for his pains.

What happened was that the Chilean government formerly re-insured its business with certain Axis insurance companies, Tokyo Fire and Marine, Munich, and Trieste Generale. This meant that the Axis countries received vital information regarding the property they insured, such as cargoes, ships, nitrate plants, etc.

So at the urging of the State Department, Armando Hamell, head of Chile's Reinsurance Bank, arranged to cut out all dealings with Axis insurance companies and deal only with U. S.-British companies.

But after this was arranged British insurance companies took the lead in hiking rates, cutting out commissions, and refusing to turn any business back to Chile. American companies followed the British lead. They no longer had any competition, didn't have to meet lower Axis rates, made the most of their monopoly.

No wonder Armando Hamell in Santiago has been burning up the telephone to New York telling friends what he thinks of the State Department and British-American business.

Mabel Is a Lady Jeep—But the Emir Falls Hard

Amman, Transjordan.—The Emir liked Mabel. There was no question about that. As soon as he stepped out of his royal tent 800 feet below sea level in the warm Jordan Valley and saw Mabel standing there, he smiled.

"What is it?" he asked us in Arabic through his interpreter.

"Your Highness," we said, "that is a jeep."

And a minute later the Emir Abdullah, ruler of Transjordan, resplendent in his brocaded robe and white hattah, had climbed into the first American jeep to penetrate his little kingdom. It was the first recorded instance of an Arabian Emir sitting in America's most popular wartime car. Finally His Highness spoke.

"Well?" he said and the interpreter translated.

Able Mabel

In nothing flat we vaulted into Mabel, switched on the ignition and coaxed her into action. Mabel had had a rough time battling the snow, mud, sand and hills of the Levant for three weeks and we wondered whether she'd let us down now. "Please, Mabel," we whispered, and the old girl responded heroically. We lunged ahead over the bumpy, rutted desert road.

After boldly plunging across a couple of wadis, we looked at the Emir. He was still smiling.

"Queyess keeter?" was ventured. That is Arabic for "Very good?"

"Queyess keteer!" replied the Emir and grinned.

We spun Mabel around a couple of times to show off her ability to turn on a one-piastre piece, and started back. A dozen determined boys from the Arab Legion, armed with rifles, bandoliers and knives, were clustered around the royal tent, all set to start an international incident if we didn't bring back their chief.

Royal Reception

The Emir was all smiles when he stepped out of Mabel. He gazed fondly at her before asking us into his tent for a cup of coffee. The men also broke into smiles and swarmed around the jeep examining it and admiring the American flag we had pasted on the windshield. It was a Cairo version of the Stars and Stripes—ten stars and eleven stripes.

Inside the Emir's tent, we sipped Turkish coffee and paid homage, via the interpreter, to his little country which declared war on Hitler away back in 1939.

As we left, we asked him how he enjoyed his ride.

"Very nice," he said. "Very smooth. Very comfortable."

Which was kind of him, for although Mabel's a nice old girl, she's definitely not smooth and absolutely not comfortable.

New Citizens Gain; 1942 Total Exceeded

With 84 persons receiving their final citizenship papers yesterday in District Court before Justice F. Dickinson Letts the total for the first five months of this year, amounting to 658, exceeds by 15 the total for the entire year of 1942.

Attorney James R. Kirkland, chairman of the Americanization Committee of the Bar Association, told the new citizens that a part of the new responsibility which had come to them was that of assisting the country to enforce the war emergency laws.

"A good citizen should help to destroy the black market. Rationing is a democratic effort to insure the fair and equal distribution of food and supplies to everyone." He warned them "not to hoard nor be wasteful and not to travel except when necessary."

Freighters Collide

Cleveland, June 1 (AP).—Two lake freighters collided in a heavy fog 28 miles northeast of Cleveland early today and made port lashed together, seven hours after the crash. The ships were the Irving S. Olds and the C. O. Jenkins. No injuries were reported.

Ship Torpedoed; Crew of 30 Saved

Miami, Fla., June 1 (AP).—Capt. Julius F. Swenson of Piedmont, N. Y., reported here that all 30 men aboard his vessel, a small United States merchantman, were saved after the ship was torpedoed by a hit-and-run Axis submarine early in May.

The attack occurred in the South Atlantic, off a large West Indian island.

It's time by the calendar to begin featuring garden specials on the menu and save those canned goods for future days. These garden specials can well be served as double-duty foods, for they can be both the main course and the vegetable course . . . time-savers and appetite satisfiers all at the same time.

SAVORY STUFFED TOMATOES

Wash tomatoes, slice off stem end and scoop out the center leaving a tomato cup. Chop pulp and mix with any of a number of foods such as chopped left-over meat, shredded cheese, mashed hard-cooked eggs, precooked vegetables, and or bread crumbs. Season to taste and refill tomatoes. Place in a greased baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (375°F.) for about 20 minutes or until tomato cups are tender. A grand way to use up left-overs and still have a tempting dish.

SPINACH SCRAMBLE

Cook fresh spinach until just tender, cut finely, and add to scrambled egg mixture. Scramble eggs as usual. Serve hot as hot with tomato wedges for garnish. Tasty, attractive and certainly satisfying.

CARROT LOAF

Steam 2 cups coarsely shredded carrots in just enough water to cover bottom of pan. While still hot, combine with 1½ cups soft bread crumbs, ½ cup peanut butter or finely ground nut meats, grated onion or onion juice, and salt and pepper to taste. Stir in 2 well-beaten eggs to bind ingredients together. Pack into greased loaf pan and bake in moderate oven (350°F.) for about 30 to 40 minutes or until firm. Unmold, slice and serve as you would meat loaf. May be topped with a peanut butter white sauce.

FILLED SUMMER SQUASH

Cook small, whole squash until tender, split while still hot and scoop out pulp. Mix pulp with ground left-over or fresh meat, a touch of sage, cracker crumbs, salt and pepper to taste, and enough evaporated milk to hold ingredients together. Refill squash, place in baking dish with just enough water to cover bottom of the dish, and bake in moderate oven (350°F.) for 30 minutes or until meat is cooked and squash is slightly browned.

$1.50 Increase Will Lift Strike, Lewis Says

affected within a week to 10 days.

One barrier to agreement, in the opinion of informed quarters, was the apparent split in the operator group. Ickes pointed to this obstacle in his telegram by charging that "there are a few powerful operators who from the beginning have deliberately opposed any compromise which might lead to a reasonable settlement."

Operators Appeal to WLB

Asked about this charge, former Senator Edward R. Burke, spokesman for the Southern operators, replied: "I don't know who they are. I would like the Secretary to tell us so that we could make them cooperate."

Burke disclosed that the operators had telegraphed the War Labor Board for further instructions, calling attention to the strike in violation of a WLB order extending existing contracts indefinitely. The strike began automatically at Monday midnight when a truce between Ickes and the miners expired.

The operator's telegram stated:

"In view of this failure of the mine workers to comply with all of the terms of the board's directive, and in view of the further fact that it is apparent that no agreement can be reached on the portal-to-portal and other issues since the mine workers are adamant in their demand for 'two dollars a day, no more, no less,' which the operators consider to be wholly unrelated to any proper consideration of the portal-to-portal issue and a mere guise for a general wage increase of two dollars a day as originally demanded by the mine workers and denied by the board, the operators await further directions by the board."

Lewis Defends Retroactive Plan

Asked about this assertion, Lewis snapped:

"It's a flagrant misrepresentation of the facts."

Lewis stated that he favored the Ickes plan for temporary "earnest payment" because of his fear that some operators might repudiate their present obligation to compensate the miners retroactively to April 1. O'Neill stated that he was anxious to get rid of the entire retroactive question because of the stabilizing effect it would have on the industry.

Lewis retorted: "The mine workers believe that the operators should not hedge on retroactivity as they are now doing. As for stabilization of the industry, I am also interested in stabilization of the mine workers' stomachs. The mine workers now consider that they are being bilked—victims of a continuous confidence game on the part of the operators."

Second Walkout in 30 Days

The strike began automatically at midnight Monday as the truce between Ickes and Lewis expired. Miners, trained for years not to report to work "without a contract," just did not show up. It was the second general strike in 30 days, but the first one since the Government took over the mines.

Coal was mined only in a few scattered mines controlled by the U. M. W. and in the 100 odd mines controlled by the A. F. of L. Progressive Miners which have been returned to private hands.

"Regardless of where the blame lies for failure to conclude a new contract," Ickes stated in his telegram, "neither group can escape responsibility for the delay which necessitated intervention by the agencies of Government, and the President of the United Mine Workers cannot escape responsibility for the cessation of work today."

Antistrike Move Mapped in House

before the committee yesterday. Spokesmen for each agency opposed a different set of the bill's provisions, but their combined objections encompassed all but three sections of the measure.

The unopposed sections included provisions of the original Senate-passed Connally bill imposing criminal penalties against persons who instigate strikes in Government-owned plants, power for the WLB to compel witnesses to testify and submit papers, and House bill provisions for registration of unions.

On only three sections of the bill was there unanimous opposition by representatives of both the war procurement and war labor agencies—House bill provisions for 30-day notice of strikes, a secret strike ballot, and power for workers in Government-owned plants to petition the WLB for wage adjustments.

Explain Their Objections

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph Bard, Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy and Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, vice chairman of the Maritime Commission, confined their opposition to these sections, contending their practical effect would be to "legalize" strikes now banned by labor's "no strike agreement," and to put the Government in the collective bargaining business.

Secretary of Labor Perkins argued that enactment of general labor legislation at this time would be harmful to the war effort.

But she told the committee that she thought John L. Lewis "is entirely wrong in his position that he won't go before the labor board."

McCloy said the War Department opposed some sections of the bill because they might interfere with procurement of war materials. He said he did not think it was time to throw over voluntary labor machinery which has worked well in that respect in the past.

Opposes Three Sections

Bard said the Navy Department raised no objections to labor legislation as such, but opposed only provisions (Sections 2, 3 and 12) which, he said, legalized strikes and gave collective bargaining power to employes in plants taken over by the Government.

Rear Admiral Vickery said the Maritime Commission also confined its objections to the same three sections.

Post Seeks 'Ideal Dad' Nominations

Dad doesn't have to be overlooked at every season except Yuletide—so comes now a three-week period when the head of the house becomes the principal figure as The Post sponsors its annual "ideal father" search in anticipation of Father's Day June 20.

Probably he isn't in the higher income brackets; undoubtedly his brow is furrowed with the combined woes of taxes, rationing and headlines. Chances are that his temper doesn't remain on an entirely even keel when the rabbits spoil his victory garden. But he's a perfect pop after all—and The Post wants to know about him.

How does he occupy his time when he isn't kneedeep in problems of his office? How does he listen to your own troubles? What does he wear when he putters about the house on free Sundays? What is his preference in baseball teams? How is his supply of jokes? Does he insist on appearing daily in a somewhat baggy gray suit, or is he a pretty dapper chap? Does he religiously turn up in the gay tie you gave him last Father's Day, or does he bury it deep in his closet and stick to his somber blues? Is he allergic to news commentators, and how does he react to the movies?

The letters may be any length and neatness is no object; the judges will regard only subject matter. They may be funny or serious, as long as they bring out Dad's personality. And the sooner they arrive the better—for excerpts will be used from day to day, on a purely anonymous plane, to show just what other fathers are like.

Don't forget—the deadline is June 15.

British Resume Bombing After Two Nights' Lull

London, June 1 (AP).—British light bombers and fighters carried the Allied air offensive to western Europe today after the R. A. F.'s heavyweights had remained inactive for two nights following their busiest week of the war and American heavy bombers were kept at their British bases for the third consecutive day.

R. A. F. planes shuttled over the Channel throughout the day, attacking enemy shipping in coastal waters and railway targets in northern France, and scoring a five-to-one victory over enemy fighter craft.

Typhoon bombers, escorted by fighters, damaged five small enemy supply ships in an attack off the coast of Holland in the forenoon.

Squadrons of fighters shot up railway installations in northern France in afternoon operations. The fighter pilots shot down two Focke-Wulf 190's and three Messerschmitt 109's during the daylight sweeps and lost only one of their own planes.

Peyrouton Resigns as Algerian Governor to Help Cause of French Unity

the committee as a whole.

(Ralph Howard, of N. B. C., reported in an Algiers broadcast that Peyrouton's resignation is likely "to blow the lid off negotiations between De Gaulle and General Giraud for French unity." By tendering his resignation to de Gaulle, Howard said, Peyrouton has placed him in command of all Algerian military and civil affairs. He added that this may postpone the unity meeting of the committee scheduled for Wednesday and future meetings as well.

(Howard also reported indications of growing friction abetween the two generals, with de Gaulle said to be insisting that Giraud be a military commander but not a member of the committee.

(Winston Burdett, Algiers correspondent for C. B. S., observed "this is really an unexpected victory" for de Gaulle.)

Peyrouton's Resignation

To De Gaulle, Peyrouton sent a letter saying:

"Considering that unity of all Frenchmen is the only means of obtaining victory which will restore our grandeur and wishing to bring about this event, I place at your disposition my post as governor general of Algeria, although in doing so I do not abandon my many friends of Algeria, French and Musselman, who in recent and unanimous demonstrations have given me their confidence."

He said his "gesture is inspired by my higher and disinterested will for union" of all Frenchmen, and "I simply ask you insofar as the president of the executive committee can persuade the military authorities that you arrange it so I can serve as a captain of reserve colonial infantry."

Foe of Pierre Laval

De Gaulle replied that "in the terrible trial through which the fatherland is going I am sure all Frenchmen appreciate as I do the value of your action. I ask you to transmit your functions to the secretary general of Algeria and ask you to consider yourself as mobilized and at the disposition of the commander in chief of the Middle East" as an infantry captain.

Committee Formed

De Gaulle was reported to be insisting upon an immediate purge of officials whom he considers pro-Vichy before any other action is taken. Giraud was said to favor such a purge, but believes it should be carried out by the committee as a whole, with each case considered individually rather than by a blanket removal now of all those officials to whom De Gaulle objects.

De Gaulle's "First List"

De Gaulle, it was learned, yesterday submitted a list of 15 officials whose removal he demanded, describing it as his "first list." It included Peyrouton, Pierre Boisson, governor general of French West Africa who fought off De Gaulle's attempt to land at Dakar in French West Africa; Gen. Auguste Nogues, governor of French Morocco; Admiral Michelier, and Jean Marie Bergeret, Giraud's deputy for civil affairs.

A former Vichy government minister but a foe of Pierre Laval, Peyrouton served as French Ambassador to Argentina, and was made Governor General of Algeria last January 19 by Giraud. He succeeded Yves Chatel, accused of pro-Vichy tendencies.

Peyrouton had served France in colonial and foreign posts in prewar years. After the fall he became Minister of the Interior in the Petain cabinet and was instrumental in the ousting of Laval from the government in December, 1940. He resigned from the government after Laval returned to power.

As secretary-general to the police administration in France in 1940, Peyrouton was said to have sponsored many of the anti-Jewish laws and to have been active in suppression of the Communists.

Committee Meets

Other members of the seven-man governing body for Fighting France met with Giraud and De Gaulle today. The committee will name two more members.

In actuality, there is no disagreement over the personnel of the committee. The seven have met and begun deliberations, but no formal motion declaring it to be in existence as a governing body had yet been introduced.

The main reason for this is De Gaulle's insistence upon establishment of certain points before his own personality and leadership are submerged in the collective responsibility of the committee.

De Gaulle also is making a strong point of "real French sovereignty." This may be interpreted in many ways, but might mean curtailment of some of the concessions made to the Allied command in North Africa. De Gaulle has no objection to the Allied command in itself, but insists that its authority be limited to purely military matters.

with Japanese inscriptions on it. So there was no doubt whatever about where the bomb came from, nor its having started a fire."

"We know that the Western Defense Command is disturbed about the possibility of Japanese planes coming in east of the Cascades, and then going over the Cascades and dropping their bombs as they go out to sea again," Watts declared. "If they get a smoke blanket over the Cascades, they will have a perfect shelter."

He quoted Major General Ulio of the Western Defense Command as reporting forest fires have caused the falling of ashes as far as 280 miles at sea off the Pacific Coast.

OPA Atmosphere One of 'What Next?'

Two-Man Board Takes Over Duties Formerly Performed by Galbraith

An atmosphere of "What next?" pervaded the Office of Price Administration of OPA's controversial price department to a temporary two-man board named by Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown.

Appointed to the two-man board were Donald Wallace and A. C. Hoffman, both designated as acting deputy administrators.

Hoffman, who was director of the food price division from last August to mid-May, was placed in charge of food price control. Wallace, director of the industrial manufacturing price division and senior division head in the price department, will be in charge of remaining price activities, which include those concerned with manufacturing, fuel, textiles, leather, services, consumer durable goods.

Brown made it clear that the two-man board was a temporary arrangement, but did not say whether a permanent successor was under consideration. This raised speculation as to whether Lou R. Maxon, OPA deputy in charge of information and Galbraith's articulate opponent, would become OPA's "strong man," now that Galbraith was "sacrificed" to assuage OPA critics.

But within OPA, the feeling was that Maxon also was heading for the "sacrificial pyre."

Brown himself, however, indicated that Galbraith's resignation would not affect price policies and programs which are under way in OPA. He stated that "the most important task before OPA today in controlling the cost of living is the establishment of community-wide dollars and cents ceilings for principal foods in the housewife's market basket."

In sating this, Brown in effect refuted rumors that Maxon would now be given freedom to put into practice his theories of price control and rationing, which Galbraith has attacked as leading to inflation, since he said they did not encompass price control at all. Maxon has countered this with statements that Galbraith's "professorial" approach to prices and rationing was impractical.

Meanwhile, Maxon was under fire himself from Detroit, where he was reported to have received special attention from the local OPA office in obtaining foodstuffs for his camp near Onoway, Mich. It was reported that a hearing on the matter will be held in Detroit Friday.

On another front, OPA announced that more than 96 per cent of the decisions rendered in price and rationing violations cases in the Nation's courts during the first four months of 1043 were favorable to the agency.

At the same time, it was declared that the black market in meat, tires and gasoline has been "materially" reduced, although noncompliance with regulations on poultry, potatoes and fresh vegetbles are practically canceling out the other gains.

Enforcement officials emphasised that "two serious drawbacks to effective enforcement must be removed—these are lack of an adequate enforcement staff and lack of authority to make purchases from persons suspected of violations."

While calling attention to the fact that a request for 1800 investigators is now pending before Congress as part of OPA's budget demands, officials stressed that more than twice that many investigators are needed for effective control.

This estimate, it was pointed, is based on an actual survey of how OPA could effectively enforce its price and rationing programs.

They Must Be in Color Really to Curl Your Hair!

Commando Raid in "Crash Dive" Prove It; Show-Business Mobilizing on Two Fronts; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

COMMANDO RAIDS, of course, are by this time no novelty on the screen. There was a rousing one to mark the climax of "Commandos Strike at Dawn," another to supply "Next of Kin" with virtually the sum total of its excuse for being, and, if these eluded any nonescapist, he can find one currently on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater to add its climactic thrills to "Assignment in Brittany."

ANNE BAXTER

But even if you have included all of these in your show-shopping, you ain't seen nothing yet!

Perhaps it is because they blow up some oil storage tanks and torpedo a few heavily loaded munitions ships and the whole thing is executed in Technicolor, but whatever the cause the effect of the final scenes in "Crash Dive" is tremendous.

This is the Twentieth Century-Fox Technicolor subject celebrating the heroism of the United States submarine forces that will be coming along to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater immediately the current "Bataan" departs. There is something in it to watch for, over and above its magnificent color treatment and the competent performances contributed by Tyrone Power, the star, and Dana Andrews, topping the support.

That something is the charming Anne Baxter, who suddenly has developed from a demure little ingenue into one of the most stunning of the glamour gals. She always could act. At yesterday's preview, it occurred to at least one present that at this point Miss Baxter comes dangerously close to being a junior Claudette Colbert.

From the Motion Picture Industry Service Bureau comes word that with close to 1000 players' names signed to a war pledge, and with all producers working hand-in-hand for the common cause, the Hollywood Victory Committee is up to its eyes in its most intensive drive to recruit talent to entertain the armed forces. During April, 34 stars and featured players from the studios went on the USO-Camp Shows tours. At last report, May promised to exceed that number. The quotas for June and July are still higher. Already the Victory Committee can boast a few records. Besides cooperating with all government and national charity agencies, it has arranged for 1809 individual players to appear in 4725 different events, making a total of nearly 20,000 appearances. A total of 3405 radio, stage and screen events have been staged for Government departments, along with entertainment in 660 Army, 306 Navy and 152 charity events. As we were saying, the March of Time has been sufficiently impressed to make its next issue "Show-Business at War."

Amusement World Holds a Conclave

It is that prodigious publicist and pundit, Dick Maney, who drops the reminder that the Four A's, all-inclusive union made up of all performers of stage, screen, radio, variety and the music field, finally has decided on a name for the meetings to which it has invited representatives of all groups active in any branch of the amusement world and which will begin tomorrow. This "convention" will be known by the capsule title of The National Conference of the Entertainment Industry for War Activities.

The conference is called to discuss plans for a total mobilization of the people of the theater that they may contribute further to the work being done by existing war agencies. The first session will be held tomorrow at 2 in New York Times Hall, with two sessions next day at 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. Lawrence Tibbett, president of both the American Federation of Radio Artists and the American Guild of Musical Artists, will act as chairman of the first meeting, which will be addressed by William Lewis of the OWI, Paul Dulzell, president of the Four A's; James Cagney, Kenneth Thompson and others of note.

Mrs. Mabel P. LeRoy, 1230 Girard Street Northeast, is of the well-founded opinion that someone should have caught a "boner" permitted to creep into "Boomtown, D. C." still in circulation among the neighborhood theaters. Mrs. LeRoy points out that when a statue of Lincoln in flashed upon the screen, the narrator credits Lincoln with having brought about "the merger of '76," which she believes is a transposition of figures intended to be '67, due either to a faulty script or a slip of the tongue. Anyhow, it shouldn't be in there!

Not all of the successful stage hits are in the commercial theater. The Mount Vernon Players call attention to the fact that because the crowds could not be accommodated on four nights last week, their production of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" is being repeated tonight at 8:15 in the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. The acting version of the Mark Twain story was adapted by John G. Fuller.

Her only previous screen role was in the title part of "Dixie Dugan", recently seen at the Pix Theater.

Hollywood, Calif., June 1.—The ones who made "Holiday Inn" a success and "White Christmas" the No. 1 song of the Nation will repeat in about five months. That means Irving Berlin, Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire, Marjorie Reynolds and Mark Sandrich . . . Ann Sheridan made another of those quiet little trips to Mexico City while waiting for a rewrite job on "The Animal Kingdom" . . . Jinx Falkenburg's costume caught the eye of a well known fashion editor, who didn't know that it was put together by Jinx's mother and cost less than $2. 'Twas a blouse and skirt of flowered print which cost 29 cents a yard in Mexico . . . When Jack Carson makes his debut in his own radio show June 2 he'll wear a gold wreath on his head for the first gag. It's a holdover from his stage debut, when he played Hercules in a Greek drama . . . Will it annoy Walt Disney to know that I call him the Joan of Arc of our Industry? That's what he is. He leads the way others haven't started to follow.

Time on His Hands

Cecil De Mille has gotten many watches from grateful people, but one he's mad about was given him by President Camacho of Mexico. It's 12 numerals are in emeralds. They're letters of De Mille's name. On either side of the face of the watch is the American double eagle and the Mexican eagle. It was given him as he was about to begin "Roualles," which he wanted to do, and then was talked into making "Dr. Wassell" first . . . John Carradine, who's boasted he'll play a Shakespearean repertoire on the New York stage, has cried "Wolf!" too often. I'll believe it when I see him do it . . . Capt. Meredith Willson's new song, "Ke-Toky-I-O," is a honey.

Mouths of Babes

Cornelia Otis Skinner told of her most embarrassing incident. When playing in Washington, D. C., she took her little son and his nurse along. They lived in a hotel near the White House. Cornelia was invited to lunch with Mrs. Roosevelt. As her son played by the White House gate he said to the guard, "My mama's lunching in your house today. Couldn't I just go in and run up and down on the front porch?" The guard let him. When the White House door opened, he popped in, with nurse after him, unmolested. They walked around, admired the place. Finally he planted his sturdy legs on the "E Pluribus Unum" sign in the front hall, and in a voice which could be heard all over the mansion, said, "Tell me, Mary, why do people dislike the Roosevelts?" Mary said, "Who do you mean?" "Well, my uncle Willie does!"

That's What They All Say!"

Two hours before Hedy Lamarr was married to John Loder, John was overheard in a Beverly Hills bar saying, "In a couple of hours from now I'll be known as Mr. Hedy Lamar." Doug Fairbanks said that after he'd married Mary Pickford. Then added, "But in a year from now she'll be known as Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks." She was. Hedy received congratulations from her former Comdr. Gene Markey. Beverly Hills Justice Cecil D. Holland took time off to tie the knot . . . When Ann Sothern divorced Roger Pryor, one reason given was that he was a flyer—she worried every time he was in the air. So she ups and marries flying Cadet Bob Sterling—so she can keep right on worrying!

LEONARD LYONS

Gossip From Gotham

New York, June 1.

Paul Flato, the noted jeweler who was arrested last week on a grand larceny charge, is a well known figure in New York night-life. His friends, among whom are the most prominent people in the Nation, regret his unfortunate predicament. The jeweler, who created the most distinctive designs in the industry, in desperation became entangled in a maze from which he eventually could not extricate himself . . . Manhattan's notables owe him untold sums. In an attempt to collect this money, Flato once had his photo taken in a 10-gallon hat and a two-gun pose, under a caption: "Pay Up, Or Else." His lawyer stopped this, saying it was criminal extortion.

LILY PONS

Flato's sales-methods were unique. Any lady who was attending parties where possible jewelry customers would be present could borrow priceless jewels for the event, from Paul Flato. Maxine Barratt wore $100,000 worth of Flato's jewels, during her dance engagement at the Copacabana. Flato permitted Beth Leary to wear his gems valued at $250,000 to the opening of the opera. Lily Pons borrowed his $100,000 necklace to wear at the San Francisco Opera premiere, then couldn't get the necklace off for two days. Honeychil' Wilder borrowed a $65,000 necklace and when she left it home over the week-end, her maid wowed 'em with it up at Harlem.

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor were among Flato's clients. They bought from his exhibits at the Colony restaurant. It was there that Flato once displayed a 1000-carat aquamarine, priced at $5000. It excited no interest, until Flato changed the price to one million dollars, and then everyone there—Joan Crawford, Gloria Swanson and even Cecil Beaton—asked to wear it . . . Elizabeth Arden once purchased, for $100,000 cash, a necklace of his matched diamonds, and forgot to call for it for over two years . . . When Flato visited Louis Bromfield's home, the novelist's children, who were playing with marbles, asked and were permitted to play with "the large marbles" the jeweler showed them—a 140-carat diamond . . . Once, when visiting Mrs. Wallace Orr, her 6-year-old son said "Stick 'em up." And from Flato's pocket tumbled the Jonkers Diamond.

Lieut. Col. Charles Poletti, former Governor of New York, is out of the country . . . Tom Wilson, of the WPB's planning board, has a new assignment in Cairo . . . Al Jolson finally has signed to appear in his film biography, which Sidney Skolsky is producing for Columbia Pictures . . . Hector Perrier, who was a professor of journalism at New. York University, will take a top post with the Office of War Information here . . . The story of Jim Byrnes' taking over as boss of a super-cabinet appeared here April 26 . . . Frank Fay, the vaudeville, radio and movie actor, still persists in coasting and taking it easy. "What Astaire is to Dancing," he says, "I am to leisure."

Dorothy Thompson, who will marry Maxim Kopf this week, introduced President Benes of Czechoslovakia at a rally by saying: "There are two Czechs I'm particularly fond of. One is Benes—and the other is a personal friend" . . . To protect the small businessman when the war is ended and when war-contracts suddenly will be canceled, new regulations will give sub-contractors the option to sue either the prime contractors or the Government . . . Mayor Frank Hague said last week: "Clare Boothe is still wet behind the ears, politically. She thinks Social Security is being in the Social Register."

When President Benes of Czechoslovakia was a guest at Mayor LaGuardia's home, he first was led to a side-room. Then he finally was taken into the darkened living room. When the lights went up he found a birthday cake and a number of distinguished guests—including Generals Drum and Terry—all singing "Happy Birthday"

Order Cutting Power Rates To Be Appealed

The Potomac Electric Power Co. will make a court appeal from the Public Utilities Commission order for a $312,000 rate decrease in 1943, it was announced yesterday, after the PUC denied a petition for reconsideration of the order.

In its appeal Pepco contended computations that should have been made under the sliding scale arrangements by which rates are adjusted annually would show that the earnings in 1942 were not sufficient to justify a reduction for the coming year. It charged the PUC erred in deducting certain amounts from the rate base and in not allowing full Federal income tax deductions.

"The principles involved appear extremely important to the company. It therefore feels constrained to proceed to have the matter adjudicated by the court and seek a restoration of the rates in effect prior to the commission's order," the company said.

Contrary to usual practice, Pepco is not asking for a stay of the order pending court action, but will compute the June bills according to the new rates—which will save the average consumer about 4 cents per month—and will credit the pennies that should have been deducted during March, April and May.

Federal Government intervenors in the rate case who sought a reduction of at least a million dollars said last night that they had not decided yet whether to appeal to the courts.

Meanwhile it was announced yesterday that the rate case of the Washington Gas Light Co., which the OPA took to court last November, will have to be reargued this Friday countries would be discouraging news to United Nations Allies and a serious blow at plans for postwar world economic reconstruction.

George Uses Same Argument

Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee used the same argument in his fight to ward off amendments, urging the Senate to do "nothing now that would show this Nation isn't entirely with the President."

The first and strongest opposition effort swung behind the Danaher committee amendment, giving Congress power to terminate the agreements by joint resolution a half-year after the war. Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut told the Senate it was "absurd" to say this change would hurt United States relations, since the President could veto any joint resolution and it would take a two-thirds vote to repass it.

Senate Republicans, who had initiated the Danaher amendment, split sharply on the vote. Seven Republicans joined with 44 Democrats in opposition to the change, while seven Democrats voted with 25 Republicans and one Progressive for it.

Burton Opposes Change

One Republican—Senator Burton of Ohio—took the floor against the change. Burton, coauthor with three colleagues of the bipartisan Ball resolution committing the Senate to postwar cooperative action with other Nations, termed the Danaher amendment an "expensive one-way ticket to nowhere."

Burton's Republican colleague from Ohio, Senator Taft, spoke for the amendment. Taft said that without it the President might block action by Congress adjusting postwar tariffs by negotiating new agreements extending for three years. "For three years our hands might be tied so we could not protect the synthetic rubber industry," said Taft. He said domestic production of tin, chrome and flaxseed likewise might need protection.

Senate to Pass Tax Bill Today

day, but the latter conceded that no serious contest would be made. Senator Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts, who took a leading part in writing the compromise, said that the Senate's vote for it would be more overwhelming than that of the House. Senator La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin said that he would speak against it, "but I don't think there will be any serious opposition." Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas said, "It will pass overwhelmingly—I'll just quietly vote no."

Compared with three earlier House bouts on the tax bill, the debate preceding yesterday's vote was as peaceful as a formal recess.

Doughton Urges Approval

Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, 79-year-old leader of the fight against the Ruml plan, whose vote finally brought the compromise to the floor, said that the 75 per cent compromise was the only bill that could get through Congress, and advised its adoption—a sentiment echoed by Representative Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia, and by a parade of Republican speakers, led by Representative Knutson of Minnesota.

Leading the attack against the compromise, Representative Cooper (Democrat) of Tennessee declared it got fewer payers "current" than any other that had been proposed, and that its effect "is to transfer an unfair and unjust part of the financial burden of the war from the wealthy to the low income brackets."

Biggest Tax Grab

Representative Dingall (Democrat) of Michigan called it variously "the Ruml plan in three-quarter time," "the biggest tax grab in history," and "political forgery."

But Representative Jenkins (Republican) of Ohio apparently voiced a majority sentiment when he observed: "If you accept the compromise we're through with this troublesome question; if we vote it down, we're back where we were—the only sensible thing we can do is adopt it."

On the final roll call, 89 Democrats sided with 167 Republicans for approval of the compromise. Voting against it were 99 Democrats, 12 Republicans, 2 Progressives and 1 American Laborite.

SUBSTANTIAL BUSINESS EXECUTIVE
Desires Washington Connection

An aggressive business man, age 45, the managing partner of a prominent New York commodity firm, dormant for the duration, now in Washington doing war work would be interested in some worthwhile employment in the evenings.

What is visualized is that some firm or organization, suffering from staff depletion or in need of extra impetus, would welcome, on a part time basis, the quality of executive ability and negotiative thinking which created one of the largest competitive businesses in an important peacetime field.

All Came Back

The daylight raid on Naples by 100 Flying Fortresses last Sunday was only an incident, though an important incident, in what is proving to be a continuous Allied air offensive against the "soft underbelly" of the Axis. Yet one aspect of it is worthy of special notice: all of the 100 Fortresses returned to their bases. What this means is clear. Our fliers have begun to wear down the defenses of Italy to the point where we now appear to enjoy the same measure of domination in the air over the central Mediterranean that we enjoyed in North Africa during the last stage of the Battle of Tunisia. Naples was not defenseless. It was defended by antiaircraft and by fighter planes. According to the reports, between 30 and 40 Axis fighters assaulted the Fortress formations. Thirteen of these fighters were shot down, and many other Axis aircraft were destroyed on the ground before they could get into the air.

If this is the best the Axis could do at Naples, the chief supply port for Italy's island outposts in the Mediterranean, the day may not be far off when the entire peninsula as well as these islands will be completely open to Allied attack. And this offensive is certain to increase rather than diminish in intensity as the weeks go by. This circumstance will not be lost on the Italians. Their morale is low already. But their morale may soon take a nose dive from which all of Victor Emmanuel's horses and all of Mussolini's men will not be able to lift it. The days of decision loom fiercely and darkly ahead for Italy.

Guns And Butter

We are a Nation of extremes. In 1941 we neglected guns for butter, and that year was a banner year for nonwar goods. Now, in our passion to convert everything into guns, we have courted the opposite danger, and the shortage of nonwar goods has become dangerous. Our lay warnings in the past are now reinforced by the representatives of many business groups. They are warning the country of the danger of a breakdown of the civilian economy owing to diversion of strategic materials to war uses. When these warnings come from representatives of small businesses there is a disposition to discount the testimony as a form of special pleading for the "little man." But no such suspicion of hidden motives detracts from the forceful protest of President Walter S. Tower of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Mr. Tower told members of the institute last weekend that unless steel allocations are further liberalized in the near future the railroads, the public utilities, oil producing companies and other vital industries may be imperiled. He also asserted that errors in distribution of steel have been responsible for complaints of shortages at a time when more steel was being made than was currently being converted into manufactured articles. Hundreds of thousands of tons of steel accumulated at ports, he points out, because they could not be shipped to lend-lease destinations, while "millions of tons went into that clamorous maw of inventory accumulations, some of which were normal responses to the increased scale of industrial activity, others of which reflected only the buyer's desire for maximum inventory protection."

Although Mr. Tower made it plain that frantic grabbing for inventory purposes is not likely to continue, he concludes that any sharp drop in war demands due to cessation of fighting in Europe might reveal tremendous inventories of unfabricated or only partly processed steel. Efforts to dispose of excess inventories as well as to find markets for a greatly expanded current output of steel will therefore confront the industry on conclusion of the war. To emphasize the gravity of the outlook, Mr. Tower noted that in the biggest peacetime year ever experienced by the industry, less than 45,000,000 tons of finished rolled steel products were sold to domestic consumers. With a prospective producing capacity of 65,000,000 tons of rolled products next year, the industry would probably be forced to operate well below capacity even in a boom postwar year. And if the industry were not working at capacity, sales of stocks in hand would have a demoralizing and depressing effect on the market.

Mr. Tower's rather pessimistic analysis is a tonic reminder that postwar industrial problems cannot be solved by any ready-made formulas laid down in advance by professional planning agencies. As a basis for workable postwar adjustments there is need for detailed knowledge and expert study of the concrete problems likely to confront our basic industries at the end of the war. The problem should rank among the foremost studies of the new OWM, and a policy be evolved to meet it. We must be forehanded for peace as we weren't for war.

Who's Boss?

On May 2 the President in the most solemn address he has ever delivered to the Nation called for the resumption of coal mining. It had been stopped. The next day the miners trooped back to work. But they did not go back to work at the President's behest. They went back to work at the command of John L. Lewis. Twenty minutes before the President appeared in front of the microphone Lewis had waived the strike for 15 days. It was this order that the miners obeyed. They kept on mining coal when Mr. Lewis decreed a renewal of the truce, and they left the mines on Monday night in their entire strength when Mr. Lewis failed to renew the truce. There has thus been demonstrated what was unclear on May 3—that the miners look for guidance to Mr. Lewis and not to their President and Commander in Chief.

Why do the miners put the leader of their union ahead of their President? Why this extraordinary fealty to a man as if he is a god—to a man obsessed with a lust for personal power and a passion for vengeance against their President? Why should they seem so indifferent to the dire consequences of their action to their own kinsmen in uniform? Why should they endanger their own hearth and home in their country's struggle for survival? Why should honest and worthy Americans knowingly give aid and comfort to their enemies?

Surely it is not because of the force of their grievances. Those grievances are in a fair way to satisfaction. The President promised to improve the living conditions of the miners, and he has more than carried out his promise. Not only has food been made available up to the limit of the existing rations; supplementary rations have been authorized on the justifiable grounds that in virtue of their arduous occupation the miners need more than normal rations. Prices have been reduced where they have been above ceiling level. And the Administration is asking Congress for authority to subsidize the reduction of ceiling prices on miners' necessities. Equal consideration has been given to the miners' wage demands. The War Labor Board's award, which was offered as the base for fresh bargaining between operators and miners, was extremely liberal, and met all legitimate grievances. Secretary Ickes ordered a six-day week to come into operation immediately with time and a half for the sixth day. The miners even have the assurance that compensation for the sixth day will be paid when mechanical difficulties prevent work on the sixth day. Why, in view of this catalogue, do the miners ignore the President and stop the production of coal?

The answer is that the miners are not free agents. In no organization on earth is there a more docile following than in that of the miners of America. It is not a question of gratitude only, though John L. Lewis has lifted the living standards of the miners as a result of the concessions he has won from the coal operators. The fact is that Lewis has the power of life and death over his miners. They are his creatures just as if they were the lieges of a feudal lord. The tragedy is that it was the President himself who delivered the miners into bondage to Mr. Lewis. This he did by setting up a special arbitration board 18 months ago to compel the nonunion miners to join Mr. Lewis' union. Now the livelihood of the miners is in the keeping of a man who owes no responsibility to anybody for his satrapy. There is no choice for the miners. He is their boss. The toils of his tyranny over the miners are shown by the fact that the miners left their work not at his behest but because he had not given them permission to work beyond the truce. He can exert his will merely by failing to nod, equally by nodding. It is useless to rail at the miners till the Government saves them from this thraldom. The time has come to recommend legislation which will insure the democratic process in union management. The emendation of our labor laws providing for such changes as accountability for funds will be far more assurance to the miners of protection than a presidential appeal to desert the leadership of this vengeful Pied Piper who now holds their lives and suffrages in the hollow of his hands.

At the same time the miners must be shown who is the real boss in this critical situation. They have never properly understood. The spectacle of the repeated obeisances to Mr. Lewis has reinforced their fear of Boss Lewis. They have seen him flout Government tribunals. They have seen him walk like Agag as a law unto himself. They have seen him take even the President's measure. How can we expect the miners to stand up to him when the Government itself has been afraid? Accordingly the President must accompany his order to the miners to go back to work not only with an explanation of the true facts of the situation but also with a demonstration of the supremacy of Government. Less than that would make the Government contemptible in the eyes of the citizenry. Less than that would mean the degeneration of our democracy into a mobocracy. It must be made clear, specifically, that any aid to the strikers in a strike against the Government at war is enjoinable. If this is not possible under existing law, it can be done by passing the Connally bill, and the Administration should at once declare that it is back of that measure. A holdup of coal is a terrible threat to the lives of our soldiers and to our survival as a Nation which must be countered by the full strength and majesty of this Government.

Farms For Veterans

It is by no means too early to inaugurate concrete measures for meeting the problems which will be created by demobilization of the armed services at the end of the war. One practical step was recommended to the Senate Agricultural Appropriations Subcommittee last week by James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union. Mr. Patton urged appropriation of five million dollars to develop a veterans' farm program on the tenant-purchase pattern and to option, beginning immediately, farm lands to be available after the war for men as they are discharged from the armed forces.

This is rehabilitation in the best sense of the term. It is infinitely preferable to the kind of cash handout to former servicemen with which the Nation has assuaged its conscience in the past. It would give to the men returning to civilian life what they most need and want—an opportunity to take up again the occupation out of which they were called into uniform. We should recognize this as our minimum responsibility to them.

Without this sort of assistance from the Government, our farm population is likely to be seriously depleted when the war is over. For land may be obtainable then only at inflated prices. Optioning of land now will help to prevent inflation of such a nature. There is plenty of land available for the purpose. Cantonment sites and the safety areas around war plants can be utilized. The rich regions of Alaska which will be opened up by the Alcan Highway, may lure some of our servicemen. It is essential, of course, that any land procured for them should be fertile and productive so that they will have a fair chance to wrest a decent livelihood from it. And the opportunity should be reserved, of course, for bona fide farmers.

By adopting this proposal now, Congress can do much to assure the continuance of family farming as the basis of American agriculture. The trend toward large-scale commercial and absentee ownership is naturally accelerated by the war. Unless arrested, it may subvert the healthy pattern of our rural life. Encouragement of servicemen to return to farming should be beneficial, not only to them as individuals, but to the Nation as a whole.

Greenbelt Babies

We are relieved to find that the management of the Federal housing enterprise at Greenbelt has denied the report that residents of that model community can have babies only by the written permission of the Federal authorities. A paternalism which undertook to regulate paternity would represent about the ultimate in bureaucratic officiousness. It appears that that clause in the standard Greenbelt lease which obliges the tenant to obtain the formal consent of the United States Government to any contemplated additions to his household has been misinterpreted. The clause does not apply to babies arriving by the normal processes of nature—but to such things as indefinite visits on the part of relatives, in-laws, friends, and so on.

The story is interesting, however, because it illustrates the point that all these experiments in paternalism are inevitably attended by some sacrifice of liberty on the part of the persons benefited. Obviously, the directors of such an enterprise as the Greenbelt settlement must exercise a considerable supervision over the lives of the tenants, if the community is not to revert to the very condition it has been designed to correct. In the last analysis the quality of housing is determined by the ratio of human beings to the area occupied. From a community such as Greenbelt, designed for "typical families" of a certain income group, the atypical in the same group must be excluded in the first place. Some effort must also be made to restrain the "typical" families from departing from the type, or the problem will rapidly get out of bounds.

At the same time it is apparent that the man who (jokes aside) must consult the Government before asking his mother-in-law to visit him has less than the privileges normally associated with the status of householder. It may be doubted whether the resident of these subsidized and carefully regulated housing developments really possess "homes" in the traditional sense of the word. Such places inevitably take on the character of "institutions." There is also a question of whether there is not a point at which the material benefits gained by residence in such communities is not offset by the inescapable tyranny of the common denominator, by the necessity to conform to the general pattern of life, and by the sacrifice of various small freedoms.

BARRACKS MOON

Barracks moon through a curtainless window
Fine-gold moon with a mist on it
Shine through my dreams before dead slumber:
Soft arms, small head against my shoulders . . .
Barracks moon with a fine-gold mist on it,
Bless me with sleep for the morrow's training
For the rifle-target at two hundred yards,
The white bull's eye marker. Make me learn
How a little brown blur of a man
Three hundred yards off in the winter forest
Has a life valued at just one trigger-squeeze.
Barracks moon, before the morning bugle
Give me rest, respite of dreams before sleeping,
Sleep for the stark morning and battle training.

State's Function

By Mark Sullivan

Poll-Tax Issue

AS A DEVICE to make an obscure thing simple, I print, as the opening of this article, something that did not happen. I print an imagined news dispatch from a State capital. For the illustration, I choose the capital of New York, Albany—but the dispatch might be imagined as coming from Columbus, Ohio, or Des Moines, Iowa, or any one of the 48 State capitals. Herewith the imagined dispatch:

"Albany—The New York State Legislature today adopted the following resolution:

Whereas the State of New York now possesses and exercises the exclusive function of fixing the qualifications for voters; and

"Whereas the Legislature of New York believes that the powers of it and of all other States ought to be reduced; and

"Whereas the State of New York believes that the powers of the Federal Government at Washington ought to be increased.

"Therefore be it resolved that the State of New York hereby surrenders a part of its function of fixing qualifications for voting.

"And be it resolved that henceforth the qualifications in this State for voting for Federal officials—President, Vice President, presidential electors, Senators and Representatives—shall be fixed by the Federal Congress at Washington, so far as it chooses to do so."

NO, THAT did not happen. It did not happen in New York nor in any other State. Every reader knows it did not happen. Every reader knows it could not happen. It would be unthinkable, at any time, and just now it would run counter to the strong and growing sentiment favoring greater local self-government, not less. Any member of any State Legislature who would introduce such a resolution would be jeered out of public life.

No, the New York Legislature did not pass the resolution imagined above, and neither did any other State Legislature. But exactly the same thing was done in a different way last week. In Congress at Washington the House passed a measure decreeing that the States should no longer possess the exclusive function of fixing qualifications for voters. Specifically, the measure in Congress forbids every State to have a certain qualification, namely the paying of a poll tax.

While this one qualification was the only one taken away from the States by the measure in Congress last week, the principle and precedent thus established applies to any and every qualification for voting set up by any and every State. It applies to such familiar qualifications as citizenship, possession of naturalization papers, literacy, length of residence in the State and voting district.

Now why? It is unthinkable that any member of any State Legislature would vote for any reduction of the State's exclusive function of fixing qualifications for voters. But members of Congress from the same State voted to do exactly that. In several States, practically the whole delegation in the House voted to do that which the State Legislature would never do.

IN EVERY State there is a legislature, which would never vote to surrender part of the State's function. But from every State there is a delegation in Congress—and this delegation in many cases voted to take away that which the Legislature would not dream of surrendering.

There are several reasons. Some are more contentious than there is space here to discuss adequately. But there is one reason which can be stated without adding to the bitterness which attends this issue. This reason is lack of understanding by the people and even by some members of Congress. Lack of understanding of the effect—on all the States and on the structure of American Government—of what the House did last week.

There is still time for understanding to be achieved, by popular discussion and education. The measure which the House passed last week will come later before the Senate. There is time for every Senator to inform himself, whether he as a Senator should vote to take away a function which his State now exclusively possesses and exercises. And there is time for the people of every State to inform their Senators whether they wish the function of fixing qualifications for voters to be taken away from the States.

What is said here does not deal with the poll-tax as such. It is widely disapproved. The spirit of the time opposes it. It is disappearing by action of the States themselves. At one time it existed in many States, North and South. It existed in Pennsylvania as late as 12 years ago, and was abolished by action of the State. One State, Tennessee, abolished it last year. It continues in only seven Southern States. In most of these States increasing public opinion favors abolition of it.

Eight War Jobs

By Paul Schubert

Details of Total War

IT HAS become a truism to call this a total war. We know that Attu and the bombing of Essen are parts of one whole. We know that German and Italian and Japanese add up to a single enemy. We know that the globe has shrunk to a very small size—and that the young Cossack who stops a bullet at Novorossisk suffers the same kind of pain (for the same cause) as the Dakota farm boy who gets his on a beach in the Southwest Pacific.

Total though this war is, it breaks down into separate parts. It may help us to understand its complexity and the difficulties of its strategy if we look at eight main jobs, each one very distinct from the others, all eight of which have got to be accomplished before the war is won.

1. THE RUSSIAN Front job. This is far and away the war's biggest ground front; it also involves a big percentage of the war's tactical air power. To guarantee a Russian victory on this front, we must keep Russia supplied with everything needed to win battles—weapons, munitions, fuel, food, and all the rest. We must transport these supplies to Russia, and see that the lines of supply stay open. As for Russia's part, the Russians must go on fighting against Germany at full strength.

2. The European West Front job. This is essential to engage the German and Italian troop reserve, and prevent a stalemate on the Russian front. This job involves invasion of the continent, probably multiple invasion, with all that this means in the combined operation of sea power, ground strength, and tactical air power.

3. The strategic bombing of Germany and Italy. This is the "pure air power" job in the European theater—the job of bombing Axis production and transport facilities, with the objective of throttling Axis ability to supply field armies with weapons and munitions, to create air power, sea power, etc. This strategic bombing job has involved the setting up of huge air forces entirely separate from the forces used to cooperate with armies and navies.

4. The anti U-boat job. This job is really much bigger than pure U-boat warfare. At bottom it is the job of exercising sea control of the Atlantic and of the waters about Europe, including the Mediterranean. We call it the U-boat job, because the U-boat is the only real naval menace the Axis has been able to send to sea. Stopping the U-boat has involved a major naval effort—hundreds of combat ships and aircraft. But the Atlantic job also ties up a lot of fleet strength, and so does the Mediterranean warfare, because of the threat of forays by German and Italian battleships and cruisers, and German aircraft carriers.

5. The Pacific naval job. The goal of this job is to stop, defeat and destroy the Japanese navy. However it's accomplished, this is one essential step which must be put behind us if the war is to be won.

6. THE CHINESE job. China like Russia, must be kept alive and fighting. Not only does China offer the best solution of the question of finding air bases from which Japan can be bombed. China is also a powerful factor in the warfare of the Pacific because of the number of Japanese troops engaged in China. The job of helping China to keep going is much more of a problem than the job of helping Russia, since China has much less domestic war production, has been more grievously hurt than Russia, and is now all but isolated. But the Chinese job is a fundamental of the Far Eastern situation—if we fail in it, the Pacific warfare becomes immeasurably harder for us.

7. The recapture of Japan's conquests. Quite apart from military considerations, we should be morally bound to force Japan back out of the East Indian islands, out of the Philippines and Malaya and Burma. From a military point of view, we are also bound to do this because the Japanese empire of conquest is a source of strength to Japan—the longer Japan is allowed to keep these lands, the harder it will be to beat Japan. Whether or not Japan was a "have not" before the war began, Japan must be made a "have not" as a result of our fighting.

8. The job of smashing Japan on Japanese soil. The Pacific warfare won't be won until the Japanese islands have felt the crash of United Nations bombs, the thunder of shells from our naval guns, the tread of our soldiers' boots. This visible token of the fact that we are stronger than Japan, is necessary to prove to the Japanese the enormity of the mistake they made in attacking us.

Any one of these eight jobs, taken by itself, is a major proposition. Taken all together, they add up to the war in front of us—a total war, a global war, a war so big that it will take the best we have to win it. But win it we must—and can.

Jehovah's Witnesses

May I earnestly recommend to my fellow citizens a thoughtful reading of Justice Jackson's masterful dissenting opinion in the recent cases involving the activities of Jehovah's Witnesses. Something enlightening and realistic needed to be said about this sect and he said it without mincing his words. To get the full force of his arraignment of its activities and his argument in favor of the protection of the community, his entire opinion should be read. However, a few passages may be quoted.

"Civil government," he declared, "can not let any group ride roughshod over others simply because their 'consciences' tell them to do so." Again: "Neither can I think it an essential part of freedom that religious differences be aired in language that is obscene, abusive or inciting to retaliation. We have held that a Jehovah's Witness may not call a public officer a 'God damned racketeer' and a 'damned Fascist,' because that is to use 'fighting words,' and as such are not privileged. . . . How then can the court today hold it a 'high constitutional privilege' to go to homes, including those of devout Catholics on Palm Sunday morning, and thrust upon them literature calling their church a 'whore' and their faith a 'racket'?"

In reply to the statement of Justice Black that "the authors of the First Amendment knew that novel and unconventional ideas might disturb the complacent, but they chose to encourage a freedom which they believed essential if vigorous enlightenment was ever to triumph over slothful ignorance," Justice Jackson replied, "I doubt if only the slothfully ignorant wish repose in their homes, or that the forefathers intended to open the door to such forced 'enlightenment' as we have here."

Finally, he declared, "I should think that the singular persistence of the turmoil about Jehovah's Witnesses, one which seems to result from the work of no other sect, would suggest to this court a thorough examination of their methods to see if they impinge unduly on the rights of others. Instead of that the court has, in one way after another, tied the hands of all local authority and made the aggressive methods of this group the law of the land."

Poll Tax

I submit that the poll-tax requirement as it is applied to the right to vote in Virginia is one of the best rule of thumb ways to determine whether or not the prospective voter has character and judgment.

In the first place it does not have to be paid, there is no machinery for its collection, except with reference to the privilege of voting, and that makes it a test of character. The man who voluntarily assumes an obligation even this small (and it is less than half a cent a day) has shown a positive determination to do his duty and to assume his share of those responsibilities to others which is a proper basis for our suffrage. The fact that it must have been paid for three years previous to an election increases its value as a test of character. The man who pays his tax every year may reasonably be considered as concerned with his duties as a citizen, while the man who votes only occasionally falls under the suspicion of being more interested in his personal advantage than the public good, and the hurdle which the Virginia law places in his way is not an unreasonable one.

In the second place, the poll tax has to be paid six months in advance of an election, and this is an excellent test of judgment. The man who raises a row because his own lack of foresight excludes him from the right to vote in an election is just the kind of man who will be swept off his feet by a lot of hooey and propaganda at election time, but that hard-headed individual who paid his poll tax six months ahead is the kind that does his own thinking and no amount of hooey and propaganda are going to sweep him off his feet.

An Allied Flag

It would be wise to have one Allied flag, symbolic of the beliefs of all free peoples. A flag of all countries accepting it would promote international good will and would be a better fighting inspiration to fighting men of many nations who are struggling to obtain the same goal.

It would eliminate many trivial jealousies among the smaller Allies when they see their flag (i. e., the Allied flag) flying over the countries that have been freed of Axis domination rather than the individual flag of any particular country. KENNETH H. HURDLE.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Portrait Of A Pleasure Yacht

("The Hi-Esmaro, $1,250,000 pleasure yacht, taken over by the Navy and rechristened the Niagara, was sunk off the Solomons in a recent battle with Jap bombers." —News item.)

I
Born in the sky's-the-limit age,
Back in the carefree days—
A rich man's dream of a pleasure craft,
Pointed for tranquil ways;
Plaything and toy in an era gone,
Ship of romance and ease,
Ending her life as a fighting gal . . .
Dead in the bloody seas!

II
Music and laughter swept her decks;
Comfort was but her stride;
Often the glasses tinkled long
Over the moonlit tide;
Rattan and silk and the drapes de luxe . . .
Brass with the glint of gold . . .
These were no more when she met her end,
Resolute, grim and bold!

III
"Make her a beauty at any cost—
Graceful and fast and fine"—
This was the order the Maine yards got;
Toasted she was in wine.
Great was the day when they chrlstened her . . .
Who was there then to know
One day she'd fight to the last red blast,
Giving back blow for blow?

IV
Dinners and parties and sessions gay . . .
Dances and fetes galore . . .
Cruises to lazy and tropic ports,
Blind to the fate in store;
Lanterns ablaze from her stem to stern . . .
Hark to the waltz so gay! . . .
Who would have thought of her then, old girl,
Dying the tough, hard way?

V
Leisurely days in the princely ports,
Indolent, happy years . . .
Opulent hours and nights of song,
Never a thought of tears!
Tender attention and constant care,
Chic as a fair June bride . . .
Fancy her now in the drab and torn Rags of the glorified!

VI
Sleek Hi-Esmaro, the pleasure ship,
Built for a sportsman's pride,
Trivial, jaunty and pleasure bound,
Comforts on every side . . .
Now are you consecrated, girls:
Blackened and burned you lie,
Fair Hi-Esmaro, the rich man's yacht,
That died as the bravest die!

King George has made Generals MacArthur and Eisenhower Knights of the Bath. Hitler and Tojo have had some tough days at the hands of Americans and now they are going to have to contend with a couple of tough knights.

It's a question, thinks Elmer Twitchell, which was the more amazed, the President or the strikers, at seeing the President's terrific crack-down in cold type.

Connecticut has refused to adopt any gestapo tactics in dealing with automobiles. Governor Baldwin announces that he will not order either the State or local police departments to hold up or check on autoists, as requested by OPA. "Connecticut will leave it to the honor of the individual," says the Guvnor. The old Nutmeg State continues to have a will of its own.

Term "Subversive"

Thank you for your excellent editorials concerning the Dies and Kerr Committees and congressional action against employes. You have made two excellent points: that of the constitutional provision that "No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed," and that the terms such as "subversive" should be clearly defined.

I wish to add that the justice given the accused by some of these investigators, including some of those within the agencies, is far below the standard of justice accorded the common criminal by the Constitution. Article VI states "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury . . . and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense." To be fired from public employment with a charge of "subversive" is a serious penalty, as serious as the legal punishment for many criminal offenses. While the common thief is entitled to all the guarantees of constitutional justice, the accused "subversive" is usually denied most of them. He is not even told the names of his accusers, so of course, he cannot prove them unreliable and merely getting revenge for some fancied personal grievance. He has no legal aid, no jury, no public trial, not even witnesses to the recording of his answers to questions, no assurance that they are accurately recorded. He is often forced to answer questions of a prejudiced or personal nature that no judge would allow in a courtroom. His trial is often anything but "speedy," dragging over several years, with no notice to the accused if, and when, he is finally cleared. Each time he takes a position in another agency a new investigation starts. His friends and neighbors who are questioned by investigators begin to wonder if there is really something wrong with the fellow who is being investigated so much.

It would seem that there could be some better method of determining fitness for Government employment. F. A. G.

Germany's Dilemma

By Ernest K. Lindley

Italy: Wasting Axis Asset

REPORTS to Allied governments from Axis Europe agree that Italy has become a serious drain on the economy of the Reich. She has had to borrow German wheat to tide her over to the August harvest. She has had to beg German potatoes to appease the hunger and repair the morale of refugees from her bombed cities. Her imports of German coal, formerly about one million tons a month, have fallen off recently, but this is believed to be due mainly to the shattering of Italian factories by British and American bombs.

LINDLEY

At the same time, Italy's military value to Germany has shrunk. Her African armies, once a threat to Suez, Alexandria and Tunisia, now huddle in prison stockades. Her air force has been reduced to a paltry auxiliary to the Luftwaffe, which itself has suffered heavy blows in North Africa and in the futile effort to check the aerial bombardment of Sicily and Sardinia. Most of the munitions for a protracted defense of the Italian peninsula would have to come from Germany. The Italian navy cowers under Italian coastal guns. It is believed to be short of morale as well as of fuel oil. Distinct signs of poor morale in the Italian submarine force have been reported.

ONE of Washington's best informed observers holds that if Germany could reckon on the military and economic factors only, she would withdraw from Italy at once. But the desertion by Germany of her senior satellite would damage and possibly ruin the morale of the Quisling governments which hold the smaller satellites in thrall to her. The whole collaborationist edifice would sag, if it did not collapse.

This view may underestimate somewhat the residue of military value which Italy holds for Germany. The Italian fleet is large and contains some excellent vessels. Until it has surrendered or been destroyed, considerable Allied naval forces must be kept in readiness to deal with it. The Italian submarine force has not ceased to operate. Occupation of northern Italy would give the Allies bomber bases within easy reach of southern France, southern Germany, Austria and Czecho-Slovakia and the vitally important German communication lines to the Balkans and southern Russia.

Perhaps even more important, a considerable part of the Axis force in the Balkan peninsula is Italian. The loss of these troops as a result of the collapse of Italy would create another drain on German manpower.

BUT GERMANY must make some difficult choices. Her armed forces in Italy now are probably not very large, and the additional forces she can spare for this front are almost certainly quite small if she actually executes the new offensive in central and northern Russia for which her armies have been grouping. If this offensive is abandoned, or repulsed, Germany's only recourse probably will be to man defensively the ramparts which she must hold to avert total defeat.

Southern Italy, almost certainly, cannot be considered one of these. There are two, possibly three, levels at which defensive lines might be flung across the peninsula. For the Germans, the last-ditch line would be the Brenner Pass, but this would mean the loss of all of Italy.

At this stage, Italian reaction to a complete German withdrawal is impossible to forecast. It might revive the "Piave spirit," named for the river on which the Italians rallied after the Caporetto disaster in the first World War. The Italians are a cohesive race, as was evidenced by the way in which all classes united behind the Ethiopian invasion after Italy was threatened with a world-wide oil boycott. The withdrawal of the Germans might make them feel that, at last, they were fighting for themselves. But this supposes that the Italians really fear the consequences of a defeat which most of them now know is inevitable. It supposes that they have something to gain from fighting a little longer, even though their cities are destroyed to the point that their reconstruction may take a generation instead of a few years.

CERTAINLY, THE departure of the Germans with their Gestapo administrators and police would encourage the Socialist and Communist undergrounds to incite revolt. The question is whether they can produce the leadership and slogans to impress the growing mass of passive anti-Fascists. Thus far the underground's leadership has been undistinguished and its following numerically small.

Current Allied propaganda to Italy encourages civil disobedience and sabotage, without bidding revolt. This parallels the underground's own line. Prime Minister Churchill's appeal to Italians to oust Mussolini and his Fascist henchmen was an exception to prevailing policy—or, perhaps, the vanguard of the next propaganda offensive.

In the absence of major German forces, two courses are open to the Italians: to fight to a bitter, self-destructive finish, or to shorten their punishment.

In either case, the end must be unconditional surrender. The American and British governments are completely agreed on that. They will make no deals with Fascist, royal or army renegades. They intend to rule Italy through their own military governors until the country has been completely liberated and Italians can make a free choice of their own leaders by democratic means.

Axis Morale Seen Failing

By the Associated Press

Arnold Cites Raids

West Point, N. Y., June 1.—Gen. Henry H. Arnold told a graduating class at the United States Military Academy today that the present bombing of Germany and Italy will end the war quicker and "in the end save hundreds of thousands of lives."

"The Germans, the Italians—and, yes, the Japs—see the handwriting on the wall. Our plans call for bombing to destruction their factories—their transportation and communication systems — their U-boat yards—the industries making their critical items—and they don't like it," the commanding general of the Army Air Forces said.

"They can't take such destructive day and night hammering. They are crying for us to stop. Their morale is already beginning to crack."

Propaganda Ridiculed

Among the 514 graduates who heard him were 206 flying cadets. Each was commissioned a second lieutenant upon graduation.

Ridiculing Axis propaganda complaining of the killing of women and children, General Arnold said:

"They are trying to make us hesitate in the creation of a powerful air arm—to make us pull our punches. To all this our answer must be—yes, war is a ruthless business and you have made it far more horrible. But we are going to end it soon—by bombing military objectives consistently and with the maximum destructive power that we possess."

Conceding that bombs often miss their targets, he asserted:

"Don't let me give you the idea that we are setting out deliberately to bomb large cities or recreation resorts where civilians, women and children are congregated. On the contrary, we select only military objectives for our bombing and our bombers have demonstrated an accuracy impossible to attain by any of the Axis airmen."

Axis Set Precedent

General Arnold said Axis powers had set the precedent for killing women and children and he cited the bombing of Warsaw, Rotterdam, London, Coventry, Plymouth, Pearl Harbor and Manila as examples.

Describing the ease with which American planes are reaching battle zones, Arnold said that in May alone 1800 American planes had been sent across the Atlantic and Pacific "with the same certainty as to arrival as we would have if 100 were sent from New York to San Francisco five years ago.

Arnold pictured the Japs as foes who "make their own rules of war."

"They are far more like uncivilized savages than like sane and cultured people," he said. "They are fanatics in battle and fight to the death. They take no prisoners and do not expect to be captured alive."

Immediately following the ceremony, 26 of the newly commissioned officers were scheduled to be married. Another 30 planned to be married tomorrow.

Congratulations, Son!

20 Questions Aid Housewife In Conservation of U. S. Food

The Agriculture Department yesterday issued a homemaker's score-yourself quiz series called "The Market Basket," based on knowing what to do with food to prevent any waste.

Approved by the Office of War Information as not likely to tell the enemy anything of value it didn't already know, the "Market Basket" lists 20 questions which the housewife is to ask herself. For every one answered yes, she gets five points.

"One hundred per cent means a perfect score," the instructions explained.

Under a heading entitled "The Delicate Touch is the question: "Do you peel potatoes and apples thin?"

Under "To Sun or Not to Sun" the quiz asks: "Do you store glassed foods, onions, potatoes, butter and flour away from the light?" This means all the time, and not just when company comes.

Questions under "To Wash or Not to Wash" indicate you should wash the hen but not the egg, but sidestep the issue of which comes first.

Under "The Watcher and the Schemer" the quiz asks: "Do you plan your food purchases carefully in advance of shopping?"

The 20 Questions

The next to the last question—under the heading "Blow Hot, Blow Cold"—wants to know: "Do you keep bananas at room temperature?"

The 20 questions:

1. Do you peel potatoes and apples thin?
2. Do you handle fruits gently so as not to bruise them?
3. Do you store cooking greens piled loosely to avoid bruising them?
4. Do you store glassed foods, onions, potatoes, butter and flour away from the light?
5. Do you scald and sun bread and cake containers once a week?
6. Do you defrost your refrigerator once a week and wash the entire interior, including freezing unit, with warm soda water?
7. Do you wash and drain salad greens such as lettuce, radishes and celery before storing in a cold place?
8. Do you wash poultry thoroughly inside and out and pat dry before storing in a cold place?
9. Do you leave eggs unwashed to retain the protective film that keeps out air and odors?
10. Do you store cherries, berries and grapes unwashed in a cold place?
11. Do you plan your food purchases carefully in advance of shopping?
12. Have you observed the amounts of food consumed by your family at each meal in order that you may prepare enough but not too much?
13. Do you save vegetable juices for soups, sauces, gravies, cold drinks or appetizers?
14. Do you keep cooking fats in a clean covered jar and store in a cool, dark place until used?
15. Do you save bread and cracker crumbs for poultry dressing, meat extenders, and escalloped dishes?
16. Do you cool custards quickly, cover, and keep them very cold?
17. Do you cool homemade cake and breads before storing, to avoid molding?
18. Do you avoid freezing apples and potatoes?
19. Do you keep bananas at room temperatures?
20. In hot weather, do you store bread, well-wrapped, in the refrigerator?

High Output Award Granted Aberdeen

Aberdeen, Md., June 1 (AP).—The Aberdeen Proving Grounds has been granted the "White Star," supplementary award to the Army-Navy "E" award given for outstanding achievement in war production.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson notified Maj. Gen. Charles T. Harris, jr., Aberdeen commanding officer, of the award yesterday. The announcement added, "You have maintained the high standard that you set for yourselves and which won you distinction more than six months ago. You may all be proud of your achievement."

Unions Gain Concession

Steel Ruling Made

In an action apparently without precedent, Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt yesterday gave labor unions a right to be consulted on hiring and discharge actions taken by steel plants under his order putting the steel industry on a 48-hour week throughout the country.

War Manpower Commission officials said it was the first time the Government had ever conferred this right on labor. Steel industry representatives, they said, fought the provision on the ground that it interfered with a "purely management function."

Date Advanced

At the same time McNutt extended the effective date of his May 1 order for the industry to get on a 48-hour week from July 1 to August 1.

He decreed that exemptions from the order could be granted only "for reasons beyond the control of the employer" except in cases of certain office workers, and could last "only as long as the circumstances on which the exemption was based continue to exist."

Power over the grant of exemptions and release of workers by plants going on a 48-hour week was given to regional WMC directors, who were directed to consult with "representatives of management and of the collective bargaining agency" in each plant before making their decisions.

Exemptions Asked

Industry representatives, contending that steel output was already above 98 per cent of capacity and could not be increased by lengthening hours, had asked broad exemptions while representatives of the C. I. O.-United steel workers had objected to providing a gateway to "too liberal" exemptions.

The new provisions were in regulations sent regional directors to guide them in applying the original order, which was issued just one month ago today.

The regulations, for the first time, set a deadline for release of workers whose services would be rendered unnecessary by lengthening the industry work week, which WMC officials said now averages 41.5 hours on a Nation-wide basis.

The regulations specified that surplus workers among steel's 525,000 employes must, "in any event," be released by August 1 unless the WMC national executive director, Lawrence A. Appley, approves a later date because of "an exceptional situation."

Chincoteague Project

The Navy Department informed Representative Bland (Democrat) of Virginia yesterday that Secretary Knox had approved construction of an airplane parking area at the Chincoteague, Va., auxiliary air station, operated under the Norfolk Naval Air Station, to cost $74,800.

The Gallup Poll

80% of Members Favor Having Unions Made Financially Accountable to U. S.

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 1.—When the political parties come to write their campaign platforms for next year, one plank which would have wide popular appeal would be financial accountability on the part of labor unions.

Fears are often expressed in both Democratic and Republican circles that any party making such a proposal would stand to lose the labor vote.

Yet a survey just completed by the Institute finds that, however, much the idea may be opposed by union leaders, financial accountability of unions has substantial support from the rank and file of union members interviewed from coast to coast.

Many of them feel that this policy would help to reduce such graft and racketeering as exists in unions, and that in any case the members have a right to know where the money which they pay in dues is going.

Some unions, notably the United Automobile Workers, have already adopted of their own accord a policy of issuing financial reports.

The opinions of the general public and of workers and labor union members on such a policy were gathered on the following issue:

"Do you think all labor unions should be required to register with the Federal Government and report the amount of money they take in and spend each year?"

The vote of the general public is:

Yes	85%
No	7
Undecided	8

The reaction of labor union members interviewed in the national sampling of opinion is as follows:

Labor Union Members
Yes	80%
No	12
Undecided	8

One of the reasons for labor's attitude on the question was indicated in an Institute survey reported last week. This found that the chief complaint which workers in war industries have against trade unions is that there is too much graft and racketeering among union leaders and too much secrecy surrounding the use of union funds.

Public opinion has been strongly in favor of financial accountability of unions for a considerable period of time.

Two surveys conducted in 1942 found 80 per cent or more supporting proposals for financial accountability.

A provision to accomplish this is included in the Connally-Smith bill now before the House of Representatives.

Kentucky Court Rules Unions Must Obey Wage-Hr. Law

Frankfort, Ky., June 1 (AP).—Kentucky's Court of Appeals (Supreme Court) ruled today that labor unions, when acting as employers, are subject to the Federal wage and hour law.

The opinion was given in reinstating in Harlan Circuit Court a suit filed by Sherman Williams, a union coal mine checkman at Verda, against United Mine Workers of America Local No. 3892 and its officers for overtime pay, damages and costs totaling $1938 plus attorney fees. His regular pay was $5.76 a day for seven hours.

The union, claiming that as a voluntary association it was not subject to such a suit and that as a union it was not amenable to the act, obtained a dismissal in Harlan. Williams appealed here.

Czech Fighter for Liberty Becomes Citizen, Joins WAACS

"Zuzka" Lauwers, who has fought the Axis on the propaganda front as assistant press attache of the Czecho-Slovak Legation, yesterday joined WAACs only two hours after she became an American citizen in District Court.

Wife of Lieut. Charles L. Lauwers, United States Army Air Forces, she symbolizes United Nations unity and the American melting pot at the same time.

The Lauwerses met several years ago in Czecho-Slovakia when the country was still free and Lieutenant Lauwers was one of the many American export officials whose presence proved the close commercial as well as cultural links of Masaryk's republic with the United States.

Married After Occupation

The couple fell in love and only one day after Hitler's occupation of Prague, when the Nazi war machine overran the unhappy land, they got married.

"This marriage to an American citizen saved me," Mrs. Lauwers said yesterday.

She left Brno, her native town, a few months after the invasion, but her entire family has remained in Czecho-Slovakia. For security reasons she has not contacted them since 1941 and does not know where and how they are now.

Father Was Newspaperman

Her father was a newspaper executive on one of the papers that stanchly fought for the preservation of Czecho-Slovak independence and denounced the Munich "agreement" bitterly. Mrs. Lauwers, who holds a law degree from Masaryk University, Brno, was active in the newspaper field herself.

As soon as she arrived in this country in 1941, she offered her services to the Czecho-Slovak Legation and, on account of her previous experience, was assigned to the Czecho-Slovak information bureau in New York City. Later she assumed her position as assistant press attache at the legation here.

Mrs. Lauwers left for basic training with the WAACS yesterday afternoon.

Sergeant Will Have Different Advice

Chattanooga, Tenn. (AP).—If a certain youth due to be inducted soon has a hard time as a soldier, he can blame it on judicial advice. The youth was brought before City Judge Martin Fleming, charged with cursing an auxiliary policeman who cautioned him against crossing against a traffic light.

Judge Fleming freed him, but told him:

"Now you be sure and curse your sergeant when you get in the Army."

"Yes, sir!" the youth responded enthusiastically as he left.

Forces Nurse Quota in D. C. Only 60% Full

Washington is supplying about 23 nurses a month to the armed forces—only 60 per cent of its quota, District Red Cross headquarters made known yesterday in echoing an appeal from Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general of the Third Service Command, that all qualified graduate nurses enter military service "at once."

To map plans for bringing the Capital's recruiting up to its "base minimum" of 38 nurses each month, a meeting of the nurse recruitment committee of the District Red Cross has been called by its chairman, Sister Olivia, director of nursing at Catholic University.

"More thn 12,000 women will be required by the Army alone in the next 12 months," General Reckord stated. "Nurses will be appointed from the registers furnished by the American Red Cross." He urged that all those who are qualified to inquire of the Red Cross.

Under War Department regulations applicants must be between 21 and 45 years old. Married nurses with some minor limitations may also be accepted for appointment during the war emergency. All applicants must be a graduate of an accredited high school or have an educational equivalent thereof; or if graduated before 1934 must have a minimum of two years high school; a registered nurse and a citizen of the United States or the Philippine Islands or of a cobelligerent or friendly country who otherwise possesses the same qualifications as a citizen of the United States.

Col. Rosecrans Prepares Men For New Drive

Lieut. Col. Harold E. Rosecrans, whose amphibious troops helped to throw the Japanese out of Tulagi last August, is preparing his Marines for new and heavier blows against the Nips in the South Pacific area.

ROSECRANS

Wounded during the Solomons campaign Colonel Rosecrans has returned to active duty and is now Marine combat commanding a combat engineer regiment, a dispatch by Sergt. Arthur E. Mielke, Marine Corps combat correspondent, disclosed yesterday.

Colonel Rosecrans, whose wife lives at 4607 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, enlisted in the Marine Corps in April, 1917, and was commissioned several months later in France. In 1933-1934 he was Marine Corps Aide at the White House.

At one time editor and publisher of Leatherneck, Marine Corps Magazine, Colonel Rosecrans saw service in various Central American expeditions after he came back from the First World War. He was raised to his present rank in January, 1942. His son, Robert D. Rosecrans, attends Randolph-Macon Preparatory School, Va.

Sailor Attacks Woman of 68

Philadelphia, June 1 (AP).—Mrs. Ellen Carroll, 68-year-old mother of 14 children, was beaten unconscious by a sailor early today outside a church where she had sought safety.

Police, summoned by nuns who had heard the commotion, arrested a man on charges of aggravated assault and battery and rape. He gave his name as Eugene R. Dunn, 31, of Richmond, Va., a cook attached to a receiving ship at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

ALL-STAR SUMMER IN TROIKA. An international tang signalizes the first of a series of all-star summer revues starting tomorrow at the Troika. Mayla, Chinese-Russian beauty and singer, will contrast with Ray Benson, American magician, and the Latin-ish dancers, Georges and Irene, who used to be George and Jalna, and come direct from Boston's uppity Copley-Plaza . . . Helen Hamilton will keep Troika open all summer—for the first time in its history.

Shep Field's "new music," starting tomorrow at Uline's, has been heard only once before in Washington — at the Victory Room. No brass, but loads of saxophones, ranging from the itty-bitty to monster size.

BIGGEST LITTLE FAN. A 25-pound bundle of pep bearing the name of G. Stuart Thatford, jr., is the favorite customer and fan of Frank Victor and his crew in the Neptune Room. G. Stuart, who is nearly a year old, likes to sit near the bandstand, stands up in his high chair and applauds, is agog when Connie Howell shakes the maracas. He usually brings his parents and a couple of Naval officers with him.

LEO TELLS 'EM. In the spring of '42, Leo of the Mayfair told a girl that she would marry soon, but her husband would leave for foreign parts, that her father was likely to lose his property. She giggled off the prophecies. But in a few months she met a Naval officer, soon married him. Last week her father lost his ranch . . . Now she's really worried—for Leo also told her that after her husband left she wouldn't see him for four years.

UGALOBLISHVILY DJUGASHVILY. That is not double talk. It's the full name of George who greets you at the Balalaika. George, who served three years on the Russian Front in World War I, says his last name is the same as Stalin's real name.

HERBERT IN THE WASTE BASKET. Roy Herbert of the Lounge Riviera has one great regret. When he worked for Victor Herbert he saw the great composer toss many a pretty tune in the wast basket. "If I'd only picked that stuff out of the waste basket," says Roy, "we could have a new Herbert cycle in 1943."

TAILORED GIRLS. Margaret Lopatin of Burt's Trans-Lux is living in a series of sleekly tailored suits—in red, black, blue and plaids. She dresses 'em up with an endless variety of blouses. . . . Virginia Dare of Ruby Foo's is dainty in a pale gray striped tailleur with a tri-color lapel pin. She feminizes the costume with frivolous pumps. . . . WAVES all look cute, but one of the cutest was out at Crossroads. For her evening out she was wearing nylon hose and smart black pumps instead of those dismal oxfords and thick stockings that are prescribed for duty. . . . Eve Knight of the King Cole Room wears sirenish gowns when she sings, but if you meet her on the street, she'll probably be wearing a frisky little tailored suit.

George Cavanaugh, assistant manager of the Hamilton and its Rainbow Room, is one of five brothers who all played on Notre Dame football teams. His brother, Frank C. Cavanaugh, was the famed "Iron Major."

FLUFFY GIRLS. Rita Cansino, dancing at the Lotus, is wearing a white gown covered with crisp ruffles, all edged in scarlet. . . . Earline King of the Dubonnet Room is summery in clinging white silk jersey, wears gardenias in her hair. . . . Blonde Kathleen Quinn of El Patio is prettier than a magazine cover in sheer black lace. . . . Chic is the word for Virginia Pearson of the Louisiana in her green gown with a white top striped with blue-green spangles.

George Adams is baritoning into his third week at Kavakos Grill and Frankie Donato has been having fits (or something very like 'em) for, lo! these 11 weeks.

Has Toe Cut Off To Join Marines

Welch, W. Va. (AP).—O'Dell Dye, son of State Police Sergeant C. B. Dye, wanted to get into the Marine Corps so badly that he had one of his toes cut off.

Young Dye was rejected once because the little toe on his left foot had been broken when he was a child and would not straighten.

He was not discouraged, however, and went to a clinic at Welch and told the surgeons to get to work after being informed that if the toe was taken off he would get his uniform.

Net income of the Washington Gas Light Co. soared to $205,484 in April, an increase of $55,957 over the same month last year. The spurt was attributed to colder weather this year.

For the first four months this year Washington Gas Light Co. reported net income of $952,649, against $812,779 last year. Operating revenues were $5,083,585, up $368,023, while operating expenses totaled $3,905,819, up $200,026.

Meters in services in the District of Columbia increased 4744 over a year ago to a total of 185,126. The company expended approximately $80,000 in April and $634,000 in the first four months of this year for extensions to its property in Washington.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 1 (AP).—Grain futures prices tended lower today under the leadership of rye, but trading was at a slower pace than in recent sessions.

Conflicting private crop forecasts of probably grain harvests and uncertainties regarding the government loan rate and prospective ceilings caused traders to proceed with caution.

Henry Ford, Near 80, Succeeds Son as President of Dynasty

Mrs. Edsel Ford, Four Key Men Are Added To Directorate

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit, June 1.—Henry Ford, who will be 80 years old next July 30, came back today to the presidency of the Ford Motor Co. after a lapse of 24 years.

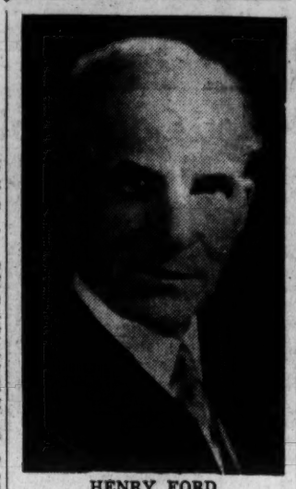
He took over the office made vacant by the death last week of his only son, Edsel. At the same time he joined with other members of his family, shareholders of the company, in adding to its board of directors a number of the key men upon whom he has replied greatly for many years in carrying on company affairs.

Charles E. Sorensen was re-elected vice president; B. J. Craig, who has been assistant treasurer, was named vice president and treasurer; H. L. Moekler, secretary and assistant treasurer, and H. E. Schluchter assistant secretary and assistant treasurer.

To the board of directors—which had consisted of the elder Ford, his grandsons, Henry Ford 2d and Benson Ford, and Sorensen—were added Mrs. Edsel Ford, Harry H. Bennett, M. L. Bricker, Craig and R. R. Rausch.

In the election of Bennett, Bricker, Craig and Rausch, sources close to the company saw the probability that with Sorensen they would constitute a sort of supercouncil to administer the activities of the company that extend into the far reaches of the world.

Particularly close to the elder Ford for many years have been Sorensen and Bennett. Sorensen, 61 years old, has designed Ford factories throughout the world, created many production processes and developed many Ford patents.



HENRY FORD

He joined the Ford organization in 1905.

Those close to the Ford company expect affairs of the great company to be carried on much as they have been in the past with the elder Ford sidestepping as much executive routine as possible. They point out that the founder is quite able despite his age to carry on as a full-time executive, but he dislikes that type of work and would prefer to tinker in his laboratory or watch how others carry out the ideas born in his mind.

The newest executive setup in the Ford organization comes almost four decades from the time Ford formed his company with paid-in capital of $28,000. The company, with assets now aggregating approximately three-quarters of a billion dollars, was organized June 16, 1903.

Motors, Oils Lead Upturn In Stock List

By the Associated Press

New York, June 1.—Selective investment demand persisted in today's Stock Market, especially for issues in the peace category, but many steels, rails, aircrafts and others with an armament rating were neglected.

Motors, oils, tobaccos and assorted blue chips rose fractions to 2 or more points, many to new highs for 1 to 3 years, after a hesitant start. While losers were numerous at the close, plus marks were in the majority.

Customers generally returned from their lengthy holiday with bullish leanings notwithstanding buying restraints reflected in some groups by widespread walk-outs in the coal labor field. Further encouraging war news over the weekend again served to strengthen sentiment for stocks that stand to benefit by the conclusion of the world conflict.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished with a net gain of one-tenth of a point, at 52.1, best level since January 3, 1940. Of 900 individual issues traded, 371 were up, 305 down and 224 unchanged. There was a revival in low priced utilities at the last and large blocks of these helped put the day's volume at 1,259,600 shares against 1,047,729 last Friday.

Chicago Great Western preferred joined the "new high" class with an advance of one-half, at 20⅞, when directors voted a dividend of $1.25 on this stock, compared with 62½ cents paid in March.

Bonds were mixed. At Chicago, wheat was off one-half to 1 cent a bushel, and hogs 10 to 15 cents higher. Cotton conceded 10 to 50 cents a bale.

Litwhiler and Naylor Traded to Cards by Phils

Clary's Single in 10th Beats Indians, 3 to 2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

GOMEZ DEPT. If Lefty Gomez doesn't win a ball game for the Nats he still represents a bargain for the Washington club. On what used to be a morgue-like Washington bench, the garrulous Gomez is heaven-sent. The old Yankee has breathed life into a dead-fish dugout.

POVICH

Gomez isn't brooding about the loss of his fast ball after 11 seasons as one of the highest-paid pitchers in the majors. He hasn't retired to the bench. Lefty sits out in front on the concrete steps, whooping it up incessantly for the Nats, tossing his sly barbs at the opposition, and making a grim business of giving his teammates a lift.

No job on the club is too menial for Lefty. On Decoration Day, when the humidity was suffocating and the players came back to the bench to droop in fatigue, the guy who grabbed a towel at the end of each inning and fanned Catcher Jake Early back into a state resembling life was Gomez. Lefty never learned how to big-shot it.

When Alex Carrasquel walked off the field the winner of the first game of the day against the Indians, the first guy to greet him and pump his hand was Gomez, who rushed half-way to the pitching mound in his exuberation. It was the only Yankee stuff Gomez is bringing to the Nats. They can use it, incidentally.

COUNT FLEET DEPT.—Actually the man responsible for bringing Count Fleet to racing was the late Willis Sharpe Kilmer, famous breeder of Sun Beau, the son of Sun Briar. Mr. Kilmer's predilection for Sun Briar blood lines was a powerful factor in the case history of the Count.

So strong were Kilmer's convictions of the potency of his Sun Briar's blood that when he retired the horse to the stud in 1919, he decided to get Sun Briar's dam for his stud also. That same year he brought over the 11-year-old Sweet Briar II from England. At the mare's side was the suckling foal, Sunreigh.

Sunreigh developed into a nice, big, rangy chestnut but had little racing success and retired after the 2-year-old season without a victory to his credit. His best race was a second to Snob II. But into the Kilmer stud went Sunreigh.

He sired only 10 foals, but one of them was the colt Reigh Count, which won the Derby and was the greatest horse of his time. Kilmer sold Reigh Count to John D. Hertz in whose colors he became the 3-year-old champion, and the daddy of the horse we know as Count Fleet.

WHITE SOX DEPT.—Until Decoration Day, Jimmy Dykes' White Sox had developed the most annoying jinx ever to visit itself on a big league club. Five runs was the team's limit. Never were they able to score more in any game. The figure "5" had become a nightmare to the Sox.

They had played 27 games, mind you, since the start of the season, never scoring more than five runs, often not that many, and their seventh-place standing reflected their impotency. Dykes' humor was not improved either, a few days ago when the Nats scored six runs in one inning against his Sox.

On Decoration Day the White Sox managed to score their allotted five runs, but at the end of nine innings they were tied up with the Yankees. Thus with the game going into extra innings, the Sox's chances seemed hopeless. But in the tenth, the figure "5" again entered their lives. To the amazement of even themselves they scored five runs in the tenth and won the ball game, 10 to 5.

They lapsed into their old habits in the second game of the day, scored only four runs and took a licking.

DiMAGGIO DEPT.—The DiMaggios are now distributed equally among the Army, the Navy and the Pittsburgh Pirates. Vince is the only DiMaggio now playing ball. He was always the least famous of the three brothers. Like the others, he has always been an outfielder.

Vince's kid brothers, Joe and Dominic, came along to over-shadow him as a ball player. In fact, Joe beat him to the big leagues. After the Yankees brought Joe up from the Coast League in 1936, the Braves signed Vincent the next year on the suspicion that anybody so closely related to Joe DiMaggio ought to be a pretty good ball player.

It was evident when Vince came into the majors that there was a lot of DiMaggio in him. He had Joe's same marvelous poise in the outfield. He could go and get a fly ball with that same easy lope. He could throw it, too, not quite as well as Joe, but very well nevertheless.

He had Joe's batting stance, but there his hitting resemblance ended. Vince was a sucker for certain pitches. He struck out more times than anybody else in the National League in 1937 and 1938. He had power when he connected, but they pitched him tight and he was a strike-out victim. What we are getting around to is the fact that Vince is doing better this year. He leads the league in home runs and is near the top in runs batted in. There's still a DiMaggio around making trouble for the pitchers.

Homer Clinches Struggle

Cards Beat Dodgers In Twelfth, 11 to 9

Harry Walker's 2-Run Blow Ends Wild Game In Which 35 Hits Rattled Off the Bats

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 1.—The St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers grappled for 12 innings today in a wild and desperate baseball battle which the World Champions won, 11 to 9, on a two-run homer by Harry (Little Dixie) Walker.

The victory put the Redbirds ahead in the four-game series 2 to 1 and withered Brooklyn's National League lead to half a game, revealed only faintly in the percentage standings of .641 to .639.

Even disregarding the pennant pressure obviously bearing on both teams, today's titanic struggle has had no counterpart in the major leagues this season. The rivals used nine pitchers and made a total of 35 hits, 20 of them by the Cardinals.

Dodgers Grab Lead

At the beginning Lefty Howard Pollet was on the mound for St. Louis with Ed Head working for the Dodgers, who shot away in front with two runs in the second inning. However, the Cardinals stormed back in their half with five runs, making eight consecutive hits off Head and Les Webber, who relieved him.

Brooklyn battled back, two runs in the fourth, two in the sixth and one in the seventh to take the lead as first Howard Krist and then Murry Dickson went to the mound to try to stop them.

Bobo Newsom, who took over the Dodgers' pitching in the fourth, let the Cardinals tie the score with two runs on three singles in the seventh, and in the eighth Stan Musial hit a home run with one on to give St. Louis a 9-to-7 edge that looked at the time sufficient to win.

George Munger had held Brooklyn hitless in the eighth and he got the first two batters out in the ninth, but Joe Medwick walked, Dolph Camilli tripled and Billy Herman singled to tie the score.

Walker Puts on Clincher

The Dodgers loaded the bases off Happy Brecheen with one out in the top of the twelfth, but a double play stopped them and the score was still 9 to 9 when Frank (Rube) Melton went to the mound for Brooklyn in the last half of that frame. With one out, Lou Klein singled and Walker followed with a smash to the top of the right-field pavilion to end it all.

Starr Holds Giants, Reds Score, 3 to 1

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 1.—The Cincinnati Reds bunched four of their five hits in the fifth and sixth innings today to walk off with a 3-to-1 victory over the New York Giants in a twilight game.

The contest was featured by tight pitching on the part of New York's Johnny Wittig and Cincinnati's veteran, Ray Starr. Both allowed but five hits, and each was credited with three strikeouts.

New York got its lone score in the second inning when Manager Mel Ott walked, went to second on Ernie Lombardi's slow roller and came home on Babe Barna's single to right.

Candini to Hurl For Nats Tonight Against Indians

Two unbeaten pitchers, each boasting modest records of two victories and no defeats, will take the mound tonight for the fourth of the Nats-Cleveland series.

For Washington, Milo Candini is being promoted to a starting role after recent impressive shifts as a relief hurler.

For Cleveland, it will be Big Jack Salveson, who had a dismal tryout with the Nats in the spring of 1937. Cleveland brought him up from the Coast League where for five years he has been a winning pitcher.

Coach McNally Joins Hoya Staff

Georgetown University's staff of physical education assistants, hard pressed due to the influx of the nearly 1000 men in the Army screening unit, was bolstered yesterday by the addition of Vince McNally, who resigned as assistant football coach at Villanova.

McNally, who starred in football and basketball at Notre Dame, was also assistant grid coach at St. Mary's Calif. McNally reported yesterday and joined Joe Gardner's staff.

Robertson's Pinch Hit Ties Score

10,049 Fans See Kampouris Steal Second and Score Nats' Big Run

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Two bench warmers swinging hot bats lifted the Nats to a 3-to-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians in 10 innings last night at Griffith Stadium in the noisy presence of 10,309 customers.

In the order of their heroics, they were rookie Sherrard Robertson whose pinch-hit delivered the two tying runs in the seventh inning, and little Ellis Clary who broke up the ball game with his tenth-inning single to center.

Clary, relegated from his regular third base job to the bench a week ago, found his way into the ball game in the eighth inning after a reshuffling of the Nats' infield, and hoisted the Nats to within one game of the league-leading Yankees by his winning hit.

Kampouris a Help

Alex Kampouris, some kind of a hero himself, drew his fourth straight walk of the night to put the winning run on base with two out, and promptly stole second. In the crisis righthander Ray Poat was given orders to walk Jake Early deliberately and thus bring Clary to bat.

The Indians were asking for it. Clary swung at the first pitch he saw and felt nothing. But with the count one and one, he jammed a line drive single to center and it was home, James, for the Nats, as Kampouris scored.

The boos was ringing in the ears of young Sherrard Robertson when he moved into pinch hit for pitcher Ewald Pyle in the seventh, with men on second and third, two out and the Indians leading 2 to 0. Robertson had not made a hit this season. As the nephew of Clark Griffith, he was hounded by the taint of nepotism.

Sherry Delivers

Gerry Priddy and Kampouris set the stage for the two runs that were to follow. Priddy opened the inning against Vernon Kennedy with a single to left, and Kampouris drew another of his walks. Jake Early sacrificed them along, but pinchhitter Gene Moore, batting for Sullivan, struck out.

Robertson then got his pinch hitting job and he swung at the first thing he saw—a curve ball that he lined into right field to send the tying runs stomping home.

Ray Scarborough was the winning pitcher. He took over from Pyle in the eighth and shut the Indians out thereafter, allowing only two hits. He was in trouble in the tenth when Poat and Hockett singled with two out, but Boudreau obligingly flied to Case.

A Pitchers' Battle

The pitchers were in complete charge of the contest for three innings. Ewald Pyle gave up nothing resembling a hit and the Nats' lone blow against Vernon Kennedy, an erstwhile teammate, was Jake Early's useless single in the second with two out.

Pyle losth his charm all of a sudden in the fourth when the Indians rapped out four hits of varied dimensions to take a 2-0 lead. Hockett commenced it with a single to right and was out stealing. But with two out there was a rapid succession of blows. Keltner doubled to right, Heath lofted a single to left and Cullenbine pushed a triple into the right field for the second run.

Pyle reformed immediately thereafter and didn't give up another hit until the need for a pinch hitter moved him out of the game in the seventh.

Nats Make Feeble Stand

The Nats, meanwhile, were making a sorry stand against Kennedy. They owned only 2 hits for the first 6 innings, and blew a scoring chance in the sixth when Case led off with a two-bagger. Kennedy was bamboozling 'em with his slow stuff.

But came the seventh and the Nats got tough. They put 2 runs together and knocked Kennedy out of the box. Priddy led off with a single to left and Kampouris drew a walk. Early sacrificed them along, but pinchhitter Gene Moore struck out. Bluege delegated Rookie Sherrard Robertson for a pinchhitter job and that young man clouted the first pitch he saw into right field for a clean single scoring Priddy and Kampouris.

Kennedy retired after Case's single and a walk to Spence filled the bases, and Ray Poat came on the scene to lure Vernon into hitting a pop-up.

Matters rocked along at 2-2 until the tenth when the Indians walked Kampouris one time too many and held Clary too lightly, for a fact. As for the two clubs' hits there were six for one and a half dozen for the other.

Phils-Cards In 5-Player Transaction

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 1.—Bill Cox, owner of the Philadelphia Phillies, announced today a player transaction whereby Outfielders Danny Litwhiler and Earl Naylor would go to the St. Louis Cardinals for Outfielders Coaker Triplett, Dain Clay and Buster Adams. Clay will report to the Phillies from Rochester of the International League, a Cardinal Farm.

Litwhiler, although considered the best of the Philadelphia outfielders, has not been performing well on the Phils' current Western trip. While he can be expected to play regularly for the Cardinals, the Phils get two men—Adams and Clay—who probably will take places in the line-up at once.

12 New Phillies

The latest "give two, get three" deal by Cox brought to 12 the number of players acquired by Philadelphia since the young executive took over. The Phils have given up four men in trading.

Cox joined the club here yesterday. He was in a huddle with James Gallagher, the Chicago Cubs' general manager, for nearly an hour today and then came out to make the announcement of the deal with St. Louis, which was made by telephone from Gallagher's office.

No cash was involved, Cox said.

The deal, the latest in a series of transactions whereby the new Phils regime of Cox and Manager Bucky Harris have tried to build up the club, came on the heels of a six-game Phil losing streak.

Litwhiler Set Mark

Litwhiler, 26, a native of Ringtown, Pa., set a major league record by playing 151 games without an error last year. He was counted upon to knock in a lot of runs this season, but, in spite of five homers, his average has fallen to .273. Naylor who came up from Memphis of the Southern Association, also connected for several roundtrippers at the start of the campaign, but his hitting average since has dropped to .181.

Triplett, 28, is the most experienced of the three new Phils. He joined the Cards from Columbus of the American Association in the spring of 1941. Adams, 27, comes from Sacramento in the Pacific Coast League where he hit .309 last year. Clay played with Houston in the Texas League a year ago. He is reputed to have a great throwing arm.

Geary Steals Home in 14th As Pirates Beat Braves, 5 to 4

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 1.—A thrilling steal of home in the fourteenth inning by Shortstop Huck Geary, after the bases had been loaded with one man out, gave the surging Pittsburgh Pirates a 5-4 victory over the Boston Braves today. It was the seventh victory in nine games for the Bucs.

The Pirates got away to an early lead when Elbie Fletcher and Al Lopez singled in the second and swarthy Vince DiMaggio drove his sixth home run of the year over the scoreboard. They got another run in the fifth on three singles.

Jack Hallett, rookie pitcher from Toronto, held the Braves in check without a hit unil the seventh when he weakened to allow one run. In the eighth, three hits and an error enabled Boston to knot the score.

In the fourteenth, Geary singled and went to second when Johnny Lanning's bunt went for a hit. Frankie Gustine sacrificed and both runners advanced. Jimmy Russell was given an intentional pass and then, as Al Javery wound up to deliver the ball to the plate, Geary streaked for home and slid under Catcher Hugh Poland.

Two Gals Top Rassle Card

Two gal grapplers—Elvire Snodgrass, a scufflin' hillbilly from Smoke Mountain, Tenn., and Mae West, Oklahoma City cowgirl—will headline tonight's show at Turner's Arena.

They're scheduled for a finish match, with indications that the winner will be pitted against Champion Mildred Burke in the very near future.

Secondary in importance tonight is the return finish bout between Babe Sharkey and Dick Lever. Sharkey and Lever tugged at one another like a couple of wildcats, and had a slugging bee outside the ring last week.

A special two-man team match will find Abe Yourist and John Bonika opposing The Masked (?) Czar and Chief Bamba Tabu.

Opening the show, at 8:45 will be George Macricostas against Frank Brunowicz.

Schoolboys Near Deadline For Golf Play

Schoolboy golfers have until tomorrow at 6 p. m. to file entries for the tenth annual Metropolitan Schoolboy Golf Championship, which starts Friday with a qualifying round at Indian Spring. Play is for The Washington Post trophy.

Frank Emmet, whose individual efforts have made a success of the event since its inception, will accept entries at DIstrict 8515 until 6 p. m. and Merrell Whittlesey will take entries at The Post Sports department, NAtional 4200, after 6 p. m.

The schoolboy golfers will play a qualifying round Friday with play starting at noon at Indian Spring, shift to Woodmont for the first and second rounds of match play on Saturday and play the semifinals and finals Sunday at Kenwood, all courses accessible by public transportation.

Due to the cancellation of the match play series for the team championship the team competition will be renewed in the weekend event with the low aggregate total of four players from any one school taking the team title. The entry fee is 75 cents a contestant.

Galento Stops Foe in First; Probe Ordered

By the Associated Press

Tampa, Fla., June 1.—Tony Galento, the New Jersey heavyweight battler, tonight knocked out Herby Katz, Brooklyn heavy, with a left to the chin, within 25 seconds after the start of their scheduled 10-round main bout.

Katz went down for a nine count with the first blow and then was counted out by Referee Mickey Walker when he hit the canvass the second time, Galento having no more than pushed him, officials said.

Officials of the 116th Field Artillery Boxing Commission ordered purses of both fighters held up until an investigation could be made.

Eastern Routs Tech, 13-4; Wilson Wins, Gets Playoff Chance

Ogle Stops Anacostia With 4 Hits

Eastern High School defeated Tech, 13-4, yesterday to finish on top of the interhigh series standings while Tech and Wilson now face a playoff game Friday afternoon to determine Eastern's opponent in the best two-out-of-three series for the title next week. Wilson beat Anacostia, 6-1, yesterday.

A 16-hit attack, including 5 consecutive singles by Wilbur Osman, helped Eastern to its easy triumph over the Techites at Eastern and left the series leaders with only one defeat in 7 games—that by Wilson.

Wilson had to win over Anacostia to tie Tech for second place and stand a chance of entering the title playoffs, and with Jack Ogle, who marked up his fifth consecutive triumph in the series hurling four-hit ball, Anacostia was not much trouble.

Ogle fanned 14 and walked only two and ran his strikeout total to 50 in his last four games. Joe Himmelberg started for the Indians and was taken out in the second after forcing in a run. He also gave up a run in the first. Harry Swisher took over and pitched effectively, although touched for a triple by Eddie Hinshaw, the only extra base blow of the game.

Anacostia scored its only run off Ogle in the fourth inning, an unearned one, made without a hit.

Stan Pohutsky started for Eastern and received credit for the victory, although he tired in the seventh, due to the excessive heat, and was relieved by Clint Speiser, who stopped the Trainers cold over the remainder of the route.

Jack Walsh of Tech clouted a long home run in the fifth inning to give his team a 4-3 edge but Eastern came back with four runs and knocked Milo Quail from the mound.

Ernie David contributed a single, double and triple to Eastern's attack.

Tom Wingo, Eastern's regular shortstop, was taken to Providence Hospital after a freak accident when a tip off his own bat struck him in the eye. The injury was painful and Wingo suffered from a loss of blood. He is expected to play next week.

Eastern and the winner of the Tech-Wilson game will meet Monday on a field to be decided by the flip of a coin. A second game will be played Wednesday and the third, if necessary, Friday. Central won the title last year.

Principles Declared By Food Conference

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., June 1 (AP).—The text of the United Nations Food Conference's declaration of principles and resolution, subject to minor changes before adoption in the conference plenary session follows:

The declaration:

This conference, meeting in the midst of the greatest war ever waged and in full confidence of victory, has considered the world problems of food and agriculture and declares its belief that the goal of freedom from want of food, suitable and adequate for the health and strength of all peoples can be achieved.

The first task is to complete the winning of the war and to deliver millions of people from tyranny and hunger. During the period of cricital shortage in the aftermath of war, freedom from hunger can be achieved only by urgent and concerted efforts to economize consumption, to increase supplies and distribute them to best advantage.

Freedom From Fear, Want

Thereafter we must equally concert our efforts to win and maintain freedom from fear and freedom from want. The one cannot be achieved without the other.

There has never been enough food for the health of all people. This is justified neither by ignorance nor by the harshness of nature. Production of food must be greatly expanded; we now have knowledge of the means by which this can be done. It requires imagination and firm will on the part of each government and people to make use of that knowledge. The first cause of hunger and malnutrition is poverty. It is useless to produce more food unless men and nations provide the markets to absorb it.

There must be an expansion of the whole world economy to provide the purchasing power sufficient to maintain an adequate diet for all. With full employment in all countries, enlarged industrial production, the absence of exploitation, the increasing flow of trade within and between countries, the orderly management of domestic and international investment and currencies, and sustained internal and international economic equilibrium, the food which is produced can be made available to all people.

Primary Responsibility

The primary responsibility lies with each nation for seeing that its own people have the food needed for health and life. Steps to this end are for national determination, but each nation can fully achieve its goal only if all work together.

We commend to our respective governments the study and adoption of the findings and recommendations of this conference and urge the early concerted discussion of the related problems falling outside the scope of this conference.

The first steps toward freedom from want of food need not await the final solution of all other problems. Each advance made in one field will strengthen and quicken advance of all others. Work already begun must be continued. Once the war has been won the first steps can be taken. We must make ready now.

Concerted Action Asked

Whereas:

Freedom from want is difficult to achieve without concerted action amongst all like-minded nations to expand and improve production, to increase employment, to raise standards of consumption and to establish greater freedom in international commerce; and

Whereas:

The successful carrying out of the recommendations of the conference in the field of production, distribution of food and other agricultural products in the postwar period will be the most important prerequisite for the achievement of freedom from want, and requires the creation of a permanent organization of the United Nations in the field of food and agriculture; therefore

The United Nations Conference on Food and Agriculture recommends:

1. That the governments or nations represented at this conference recognize and embody in a formal declaration or agreement the obligation to their own people and to one another, henceforth, to collaborate in raising the standards of nutrition and living of their peoples, and to report to one another on the progress achieved.

Permanent Organization

2. That there be established a permanent organization of the United Nations in the field of food and agriculture; and

Resolves, that:

1. In order that every practicable step be taken to attain these and the other appropriate objectives set forth in the declaration and specific recommendations of the conference, an interim commission for carrying out the recommendations of the United Nations Conference on Food and Agriculture be established to continue and carry forward the work of the conference;

2. Each of the nations represented in the conference be entitled to designate a representative upon the interim commission, and that the interim commission be installed in Washington, not later than July 15, 1943;

3. The interim commission perform its work with due regard to the exigencies of the war through such form or organization and personnel as it may deem appropriate. It shall formulate regulations covering its expenditure and submit to the participating governments proposals for the allocation of the costs of its activities;

Commissions' Functions

4. The functions of the interim commission be to formulate and recommend for consideration by each member government:

A. A specific plan for a permanent organization of the United Nations in the field of food and agriculture.

B. The formal declaration or agreement referred to in the first recommendation, in which each government shall recognize its obligation.

1. To raise the standards of nutrition and of living of its own people.

2. To improve the efficiency of agricultural production.

3. To cooperate, so far as may be possible, with other nations for the achievement of these ends, and

4. To undertake to submit periodically to other governments, through the proposed permanent organization, reports on the action taken and the progress achieved toward these ends; and

C. Such proposals or reports as are necessary to give effect to the recommendations of the conference.

5. In the preparation of a plan for the proposed permanent organization of the United Nations the interim commission give full consideration to the following:

(a) The relation of the proposed permanent organization to, and methods of associating it with other institutions, national as well as international, which already exist, or which may hereafter be established, in the field of food and agriculture, and in related scientific, economic and other fields;

(b) Provision for membership in the proposed permanent organization in due course of governments not represented on the interim commission;

Other Recommendations

6. In considering the functions and duties to be assigned to the proposed permanent organization, the interim commission take into account:

(1) The promotion of research, scientific, technological, social and economic, (2) the collection and dissemination of information and provision for the exchange of services, and (3) the submission to member governments of recommendations for action with regard to the following:

(a) Nutrition,

(b) Standards of consumption of food and other agricultural products,

(c) Agricultural production, distribution and conservation,

(d) Statistics, and economic studies in the field of agriculture and food, including the study of the relation of agriculture to world economy.

(e) Education and extension work in the field of food and agriculture.

(f) Agricultural credit.

(g) Problems of agricultural population and farm labor;

Assignment of Duties

7. The interim commission further consider the desirability of assigning to the proposed permanent organization functions in the field:

(a) Development of agricultural resources and orientation of production where necessary,

(b) Agricultural commodity arrangements.

(c) Cooperative movements,

(d) Land tenure,

(e) Other subjects on which recommendations were made by the conference.

8. The interim commission also consider the initiation of preliminary statistical investigations and research into the problems with which the proposed permanent organization will deal.

9. The interim commission be deemed to have been dissolved when the proposed permanent organization referred to in the second recommendation has been established.

10. The Government of the United States be invited to take whatever preliminary action may be necessary for the establishment of the interim commission after the United Nations Conference on Food and Agriculture has completed its work.

power, for each person in their respective countries who is without an adequate diet to improve his diet in the direction of obtaining the physiological requirements of health."

It suggests this be done through "some form of direct action to make protective foods available free, or at low prices, to groups with inadequate diets;" through social security measures such as family allowances and minimum wages; and through special assistance to pregnant women, children, invalids and others.

Resolution No. 2 stresses "full employment" of human and material resources as the prerequisite of a general and progressive increase in production and purchasing power, and recommends that the participating governments "affirm the principle of mutual responsibility and coordinated action" to:

1. Promote full employment of their own and all other people, promote uninterrupted development of agricutural and other material resources.

2. Secure for agriculture the stimulus of additional purchasing power through sound development of industry.

3. Assist achievement of these aims by supplying capital, equipment and technical skill.

4. Reduce barriers of every kind to international trade.

Other resolutions recommend international commodity arrangements to stabilize prices and supplies.

Without Painful Backache

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

House Banking Committee Erects Barrier in Path of Subsidies

By Alex H. Singleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

The House Banking Committee directly challenged the Administration's plan to use subsidies in rolling back the cost of living yesterday as it approved unanimously a measure extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corp. for two years.

Climax of a bitter congressional protest against the subsidy program, the committee wrote into the measure an amendment "to prevent the funds of the Commodity Credit Corp. or any other Government agency from being used for the payment of subsidies to maintain maximum prices" on agriculture products.

The action came as the Office of Price Administration put into effect a 5 cents a pound subsidy on butter at the manufacturing level, scheduled to be reflected in retail prices in about 10 days. OPA also is planning subsidies designed to "roll back" the prices of meat and coffee by about 10 per cent.

Funds for these subsidies are coming from the Reconstruction Finance Corp., under legislation authorizing such payments to encourage production.

The no-subsidy amendment was part of a triple blow dealt the Commodity Credit Corp.'s program. In approving the measure, the committee:

1. Increased the CCC's borrowing authority by 500 million dollars. The agency had sought one billion.

2. Limited the extension to two years. The agency had sought a new lease of life for four years, or for two years beyond the end of the war, whichever is the shorter.

3. Added an amendment authorizing the war food administrator to modify maximum prices on any agricultural commodity if necessary to "secure an adequate production of such commodity for war purposes."

Earlier yesterday RFC Chairman Jesse Jones clashed with members of the Byrd economy committee over his authority to finance payment of 450 million dollars in subsidies to hold down the retail price of meats and butter.

He told the committee subsidy payment had been a matter of "Administration policy" since 1940, and asserted, "neither the RFC nor I make the policies."

Jones listed the payment of vast sums of money to subsidize production and deliveries of petroleum, sugar, metals and other critical items in the war effort.

Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, chairman of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures, and Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, asserted they were opposed to the payment of subsidies as well as to the creation of the new RFC subsidiaries without congressional authority.

When Jones brought out that RFC and subsidiaries have made commitments totaling over 34 billion dollars, McKellar, acting chairman of the Senate ppropriations Committee, questioned the constitutionality of this action.

Jones told the committee it was obvious "that if the OPA-ordered cut of 10 per cent in meat and butter prices were rolled back to the cattle and hog raisers and the price of cattle and hogs were reduced accordingly," the supply of meat would be retarded at a time when the maximum supply is most needed."

By a single vote, the committee rejected a far-reaching amendment, sponsored by Chairman Patman (Democrat) of Texas of the House Small Business Committee, which would have taken control of wartime food prices and food rationing away from the Office of Price Administration and given that assignment to Food Administrator Chester Davis.

Patman, also a member of the Banking Committee, had planned to offer also an amendment to give Secretary Ickes similar controls over all fuel and petroleum products, and to place enforcement of both food and fuel regulations under the Department of Justice.

He dropped, temporarily, his fight for the latter two proposals after the test vote on the one affecting food, but declared that he would offer all three when the CCC measure reached the floor for action, probably late next week.

Written into the bill was a clause insisting that the CCC receive "full reimbursement" for all of its services, losses and operating expenses incurred in purchasing commodities for the Lend-Lease Administration, the Army and the Navy, and other war agencies.

POLITICS

What Is The New Deal's FOURTH TERM STRATEGY?

Washington insiders know the question is no longer "Will Roosevelt run?" but "How is he planning to win?" The fourth term strategists are laying their plans carefully, shrewdly — making moves today to anticipate 1944 problems. What are these problems? How are they planning to solve them?

One of Washington's most politically "hep" correspondents takes you behind the scenes in the June AMERICAN MERCURY for a look at what's going on in the Administration inner councils. He reveals who will conduct the fourth term fight — and how. Why will Wallace be dropped? Who is most likely to replace him? What is being done about the split in the solid South? The defection of labor? The slipping farm vote? The battered big city machines? No matter how you vote, you will want to read ROOSEVELT'S FOURTH TERM STRATEGY by Charles Hurd in the MERCURY today!

How Can We Get More Meat?

You are being robbed of your share of the meat even if you don't patronize the Black Market! More than 20% of the country's total supply is finding its way into illegal, unsanitary hands. Yet we can control the Black Market in meat just as England has. And we can protect the health and pocketbook of the American consumer by taking simple drastic steps. BLACK MARKET MEAT in this issue of THE MERCURY, buttressed by official facts, tells the whole dreadful story of this traffic in death and home front sabotage — points a way to the answer. Church-Going Snake

Hagerstown, Md., June 1.—When S. J. Grim, sexton at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Brownsville, Md., went to clean for Sunday's services, he found a huge blacksnake curled up in one of the pews. The reptile, measuring 5½ feet, was killed, but how he got into the church, which had been closed all week, is a mystery.

Military Gets Break, Why Not Civilians?

War Department has ordered its officer personnel to take off half a day each week for "exercise." The new policy will be in effect during the hot summer months, ending October 1. Moreover, the officers will be given a full week's vacation which will give them 16 days of leave during the four summer months. And what's the department doing for its civilians who work just as hard and long as the military? Well, the civilians get 12 days off in 12 months. It isn't what you'd call equal treatment. Of course, there are many other factors involved. But the fact remains that the Army believes it wise to give its officers time off during the week and it's certain to spur the drive to give civilians time off to tend to shopping and other personal matters. A reduction in the 48-hour week isn't involved. The work week will remain the same but some system of giving the employes a break is yet to be worked out.

It happened at the embattled and harassed War Labor Board. A board official called up a labor leader to inform him of a decision the board had made which displeased the laborite. In disgust, the labor leader stated bluntly:

"You tell the board that I said to go to hell."

This message was relayed to patient William H. Davis, chairman of the board. At the next board meeting Davis told of the labor leader's reaction and he solemnly introduced a resolution which was unanimously adopted and which stated:

"Invitation accepted and we find it a great relief."

Congressional delay in passing the urgent deficiency bill is threatening payless paydays for thousands of Federal workers. Money has been taken from the President's "blank-check" fund to meet the payrolls of a dozen agencies, but the fund is now pretty well drained. The Senate passed the bill last week after an appeal by Senator McKellar, who said "unless the urgent deficiency bill is passed and becomes law before next Tuesday (that was yesterday), it will lead to the greatest confusion in making payments (to employes); in fact, they cannot be made." The Senator was perhaps a bit too pessimistic, but the bill is hung up in conference and it'll be another week, it's said, before it can be enacted into law and by that time some agencies may have to postpone their paydays.

More bureaucratese. Some call it red tape language. Call it whatever you want but it's fun giving your own definitions to commonly-used words and phrases in Government. Send your definitions to this column. Today's lesson:

"With reference to"—whether it has or not this letter must begin somehow.

"Government committee"—keeps minutes and wastes hours.

"Submitted for information"—this means nothing to us, it may to you.

"I approach the subject with an open mind"—completely ignorant of the whole subject.

"Have you any remarks"—can you give me an idea of what this is all about?

"This will be borne in mind"—no further action will be taken till you remind me.

"In due course"—never.

Labor Secretary Perkins has issued an order to bring about economy and greater utilization of personnel in her department. Coordination and centralization of legal services have been placed under the solicitor; all personnel services are concentrated under the personnel director and budget and business administration are centered in the office of the chief clerk. A policy committee on information services—composed of James Fitzgerald, James King and James Dodson—has been set up to bring about an intregated information policy and to bring about other economies. . . . Pentagon employes are getting serious about their demands for portal-to-portal pay. Those who go to work in private automobiles yesterday were forced to park great distances from the building while the more convenient space they formerly used was left idle. Employes report it took them from 8 to 15 minutes longer to walk to their offices from the new parking spaces. Many of them were late as a result.

LETTER: "Your column stated last week that the Army denies that plans to alter its new building at Twenty-first Street and Virginia Avenue to provide for a large auditorium. We wonder why? Employes this week are being moved out of the new building to make room for the auditorium which is to be used by both the Army and Navy. And the Navy is taking over part of two floors. Apparently the Army isn't very proud of the fact that it is fearing up a brand-new building to build an auditorium it should have planned for at Pentagon or the new buildings when they were under construction." Note: The Army still denies it for some strange reason. Perhaps it's one of those military secrets?

Reporter Finds Price-Checking Is Hardest Part of Shopping

By Martha McLean
Post Staff Writer

Criticism for letting higher-than-ceiling prices flourish has been leveled at the housewife, but it's a difficult, grueling job she's asked to do.

This reporter put herself in the harried homemaker's shoes yesterday. She went grocery shopping and found out what the food buyer is up against.

In many cases, however, she is "more to be pitied than censured, more to be helped than despaired."

The woman who could shop and note all the ceiling prices, keep a house and her senses all in the 24 hours in a day would be a genius in most any woman's estimation.

We started out with a hastily scribbled list of 13 items—just an ordinary list such as any woman might jot down between the dishes and dusting chores—and the three lengthy OPA top price lists published recently in the newspapers.

The tabulated results of the shopping foray at an independent grocery, showed that:

On a can of corn I would have been overcharged 2 cents had the manager's attention not been called to it. On four items—the butter, Log Cabin syrup, jelly and Crisco—we were out of luck because the store didn't have any. On four other items—the Bisquick, Wheaties, bread and Spry (which I substituted for the Crisco)—the prices were alright.

The butcher gave the benefit of the doubt on the red stamps spent for end-cut pork chops. At 34 cents and 7 points for the pound he gave me 18 cents worth for three stamps. (You figure it out.)

Untabulated but terrific were the trial and travail of checking on each price, however. If not found on List No. 1, list No. 2 was consulted. Failing there, list No. 3 was perused.

Tomato juice might come under either tomato or juice, you must remember. Then you have to check the size of the can and the quality. And the brand. The number of times the search ends in total failure is discouraging. Many, many items and brands aren't listed.

You can't very well do it at home before you start out. These days you can't know ahead of time what will and what will not be found on the grocer's shelves. And just try to narrow it down to your grocer's brand and size of can beforehand!

The checking job can be done after you get home, except that it's probably time to get dinner by then and by later in the evening the long list of unitemized figures is a Chinese puzzle.

So the reporter did it at the store and the job took an hour.

When the packages were taken to the floor clerk to be added, the little matter of a 19-cent mark under the corn which OPA lists at 17 cents came up. The clerk got out his list. I got out mine.

But he had only list No. 3, which didn't include that kind of corn. So I showed him list No. 2. He thought it must be a misprint, I didn't. A curious crowd gathered. By the time the clerk decided that my listing must be right and that the corn should be priced at 17 cents, this reporter felt like a little less than the 2 cents the discussion was over—and was not at all convinced that the violation was a willful one.

Victory Sidelights

Shopping Service Inaugurated To Aid Employes at Pentagon

A versatile shopping service for 30,000 employes of the Pentagon, which will purchase any non-perishable, easily-carried article from lingerie to furniture polish, was formally opened yesterday.

Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, commanding the District Military Area, snipped a white ribbon across the door of the shopping service in the concourse. The Washington Merchants and Manufacturers Association cooperated with the personnel department of the Pentagon to establish the service.

The plan was suggested several months ago by personnel officers as a remedy for absenteeism when workers took time off from their jobs for shopping. The employes place orders with the service and pick up the articles on their way home. A staff of five shoppers headed by Mrs. Margaret Flournoy, manager, obtains articles from Washington stores.

Campaign for Safe Walking In District Planned June 13-19

"Careless walking helps Hitler" is the slogan of the Junior Board of Commerce pedestrian safety campaign which will be climaxed by "Safety Week" from June 13-19.

Commissioners' John Russell Young and Guy Mason yesterday indorsed the board's drive when they received the campaign heads, Preston W. Grant, president of the board, and John B. Wathen, chairman of the traffic and safety committee.

"A large number of accidents is caused by pedestrians' carelessness," Commissioner Young declared, "and a broad educational program is necessary to acquaint the public with all traffic regulations and impress the necessity upon them to heed these regulations."

Commending the Junior Board for undertaking the campaign, the Commissioner said that it tied in perfectly with the District government's efforts to reduce traffic accidents.

The safety drive, supported by the National Safety Council, will be highlighted by short educational radio broadcasts and the distribution of 1500 posters, warning of traffic hazards. Government offices will display 1200 of these and 300 will be shown in the front of streetcars. A special program is planned for Safety Week, but details have not been drawn up yet.

D.C. Policeman Is Indicted In Slaying

Pvt. Harry O. Dodson, 42, of the Metropolitan police force, was indicted yesterday by the District grand jury for second-degree murder in the fatal shooting May 15 of Robert Cunningham, 22, Negro, 915 N Street Northwest.

Dodson is charged with firing two shots through the back of a car driven by Willie Cunningham, 21, Negro, a cousin of Robert Cunningham, and of the same address, after the Dodson and Cunningham cars had allegedly been in a collision. One of the bullets is alleged to have struck Robert Cunningham in the back of the head. He died two days later.

Dodson's version of the story is that the Cunningham car collided with his in front of 230 E Street Northeast, after it had made a U-turn. When he stopped the other car to reprimand the driver he claims that Willie Cunningham attempted to run him down. It was then, he said, that the shots were fired. The grand jury ignored a felonious assault charge against Cunningham.

Joined Force in 1923

Dodson, who lives at 1224 Kennedy Street Northwest, joined the force in October, 1923. He resigned in 1928 and was reappointed in February, 1935. Due to an injury he was assigned to light duty in the record department of General Headquarters until three months ago when he was returned to active duty at No. 10 Precinct.

Dodson is represented by Attorney Charles Ford who said yesterday that he had arranged for the $3500 bond under which the policeman is held.

Eldon R. Powell, 30, of New York, was indicted twice on charges of violating the White Slave Act when he was charged with transporting women here from New York.

Terry Francis Betteridge, 22, of Meadowbrook, Md., was indicted on seven counts of illegal use of an automobile and on one count for housebreaking and larceny of $60 worth of merchandize.

Other Indictments

Other indictments returned yesterday were:

Arlington Policy Declared Hardship At Session of Smith Committee

Arlington County landlords who claimed OPA's rent control operations were imposing hardships upon them as property owners and members of the staff of OPA's Arlington County Rent Control office appeared at an all-day hearing yesterday before the House Smith Committee investigating acts of the executive branches.

Committee inquiries were largely devoted to discovering under what congressional authority the area OPA office was making valuations of furniture in rented homes, instead of using the yardstick of comparable values as in unfurnished houses.

Operating Under OPA

I. Chance Buchanan, area rent control director, said he was operating under OPA regulations, not congressional authority.

Leslie Bush, senior clerk in the Interstate Commerce Commission at a salary of $2300 a year, testified that he had purchased a house at 5109 Twenty-fifth Street North, Arlington, which he had decided to rent in order to help meet his income taxes and war bond deductions.

His wife testified that prior to renting the place she had called Buchanan, informed him she had had an offer of $150 a month and inquired the proper rental. She said Buchanan told her $125 a month seemed reasonable. After the tenant had been in the house four months, Mrs. Bush said, the OPA cut the rent to $85. The tenant, Herbert A. Peebles, RFC employe from Houston, Tex., said that the action of the rent control board was taken without his knowledge. He said he had made no appeal to have the rent reduced.

Others Testify

Others testifying were Mrs. Betty Letzkus of 6000 Thirty-third Street Northwest, who described cuts in rent on property she owned in Arlington; John F. Garrett of Alexandria, real estate agent, and Carl J. Vickers, 2513 Randolph Avenue, Alexandria.

Buchanan's testimony developed the fact that if his inspectors valued the furniture in a house at $500, he estimated the life of the furniture at four years, and allowed $10 or $15 extra rent for that furniture.

Shapiro Offers Compositions Born of 19th Century Sentiment

By Ray C. B. Brown

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents Maxim Shapiro in third of six historical piano recitals Tuesday night in Coolidge Auditorium. Program: Andantino and Variations, Op. 84, No. 1 (Schubert), Ronde Brillante in E flat major, Op. 62 (Weber), Sonata in F sharp minor, Op 11 (Schumann), Sonata in A major, Op. 120 (Schubert), Toccata in C major, Op. 7 (Schumann), Lied ohne Worte in G major, Op. 62, No. 1; Etudes in F major and A minor, Op. 104, Nos. 2 and 3; Rondo Capriccioso, Op 14 (Mendelssohn).

In the arrangement of his program for the third historical piano recital last evening, Maxim Shapiro managed to keep fairly within the first quarter of the nineteenth century with compositions by Schubert, Weber Schumann and mendelssohn. If he overstepped 1825 in any of his selections, it really did not matter, for what was being represented was the flowering in music of the same kind of romanticism practiced by Tieck, Richter, Hoffman and Novalis in German literature. One can safely say the music of those four composers is best understood and appreciated when directly associated with writings of four authors mentioned, for the whole poetic period sprang from the same sources of imagination.

BROWN

It is evident Mr. Shapiro's survey of this particular epoch sighted only the familiar peaks and overlooked many charming bits of landscape which are not on the regular tourist route. He was not always happy, either, in his choice of compositions. Of Schubert's 21 sonatas he singled out the A major, Op. 120, whereas the best of the lot are the two in A minor, Op. 42 and Op. 143. The Andantino and Variations, even when dressed up by Karl Tausig, is a weak work, and in its place should have been used some of the less known "Musical Moments" and Impromptus.

Weber's Rondo Brillante is an empty bit of prestidigitation saved from nullity only by the composer's inherent sense of poesy. Schumann's F sharp minor sonata, on the other hand, was an excellent illustration of that composer's cyclothymic temperament. In place of the Toccato one would have preferred to hear something by Clara Schumann, say either the B minor or the C minor Scherzo. One of these works would have informed the present generation that Clara was more than a brilliant concert artist, and that she wrote very well for the piano.

Mendelssohn's piano music has become so trite that he could have been omitted in favor of some of his admirers and imitators. It would have been interesting to hear such forgotten things as Adolf Jensen's F minor sonata, William Sterndale Bennett's "Maid of Orleans" sonata, one of Ferdinand Hiller's sonatas, or even Joachim Raff's Suite in E minor.

Mr. Shapiro's best playing last night was done in the Schumann sonata which he read with a communicative spirit. Elsewhere his technique was more in evidence than his insight, and his use of the pedal was too often at war with his clarity of phrasing.

FHA Surveys D. C. Building Priorities

Agency Embarks On First Study Of Construction, Unused Permits

By Adele Bernstein
Post Staff Writer

A survey of approximately 200 builders in the Washington area was begun yesterday by the Federal Housing Administration to discover in how many cases priorities for new-house construction have lain unused.

This survey, the first of its kind since the war housing priorities system went into effect in September, 1941, also will seek to determine to what extent local builders have come through with the number of living quarters they promised to deliver when they first sought priorities for materials from the War Production Board. In some cases, an FHA official said yesterday, builders have requested materials to build 100 dwelling units, and when the structure was completed it was found that it contained only 90 units.

Where this has happened, as well as in the cases where priority materials have been completely unused, builders will be asked to surrender their priorities for reissue by WPB for new construction.

4685 Priorities Wait

A total of 4685 priorities for housing units is now outstanding out of the full Washington quota of 31,423 units to be built with private funds. (This quota, a National Housing Agency spokesman declared yesterday, is one of the largest local quotas in the country for this type of war housing, being exceeded only by the quotas for the Los Angeles and Detroit areas.)

Based on the latest available figures, the picture of permanent war housing, in Washington privately financed, looks like this:

Dwelling units numbering 15,262 have been completed and occupied; 9337 are reported under construction, and 4685 are still unbuilt. The remaining number, making up the 31,423 quota, have been assigned to builders since April 30, but their disposition will not be known until four months from the date of issue, expiration period for war housing priorities.

The general procedure for obtaining priorities for new houses works in this manner:

The builder submits an application and specifications to the local FHA office. If they conform with the war housing construction standards established by WPB (employing a minimum of critical materials), the application is processed and sent to WPB with a recommendation for approval. Such a recommendation is made only after the FHA's processing department has determined that the proposed building site is suitable—that there are adequate facilities for sewage disposal, gas, electricity, etc., so that new installations are unnecessary.

On review and approval by WPB, the builder gets his priority rating, which under the controlled materials plan permits him to start construction.

Check Made on Builder

The FHA official pointed out that before priorities are granted, a check is made on the builder to make certain he has a site, financing, and a good past record for producing the agreed amount of housing.

In his opinion, the principal reasons for failure to use war housing priorities in Washington are these: Collapse of financial backing, changes in WPB regulations which complicate obtaining of materials, and the ever-present demands of the draft board. Close to 300 priorities have been relinquished by builders who lost their foremen to the Army, or were drafted themselves, he said.

After the survey is completed on June 10, according to FHA, results will be sent to WPB where it will be decided what priorities should be recaptured and reallocated.

Pennsylvania U. To Graduate Six District Students

Six Washington students will be graduated today from University of Pennsylvania at the 187th commencement in Philadelphia. Because they are in the armed forces, three students will receive their degrees in absentia. They are:

William Bailey, William P. Doherty and Preble Staver. The others are Peter de K. Dusinberre, jr., Eugene A. Schultz and Betty J. Meggers.

The following four students from the Washington area received their degrees from Oberlin College yesterday:

Fay Calkins, Margaret Belknap, Mary Helen Richardson and Hortense Pace. Miss Calkins also was elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Ensign H. Powell Jenkins, jr., U. S. N. R., yesterday received his degree of bachelor of science from the University of North Carolina. He was graduated from Western High School in 1939.

Three Washington students have received their degrees from Swarthmore College. Mary Mead Smith was graduated with honors. The other two are Thomas O. Taylor and Roderick Duncan.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

The more you eat sweets, the more you want to eat sweets. Sugar creates an appetite for more sugar, not for other foods, and the habit grows on you.

You can very quickly develop an appetite for sweets at a certain time of day. For example, there is a bakery shop in a swank section of New York City where they serve coffee and cakes and tea and tarts to customers waiting for the goodies to be wrapped, and most of the ladies in the neighborhood drop over every afternoon around tea time. Needless to say, they are not streamlined.

Of course, you don't do that. But you may have the habit of rummaging in the ice box for leftover snacks. It's not that you are so weak willed. One woman told me that a box of candy in the living room draws her like a magnet and that she can't keep away from the box until it is empty. Another said that if there is a cake in the house, she gravitates to it every afternoon around four o'clock, so she has devised the plan of sending what is left home with her guests after dinner.

Some of you seem to think that if you crave sweets it must be something your system lacks and that you actually need them. But the craving is entirely habit. The appetite is false. You are hungry simply because you have become used to having food at a certain hour.

If you want to break the habit of eating between meals, the best way to do it is to break the routine for that particular time of the day. Try to be somewhere else or have something absorbingly interesting to do. Oh, you have to stay home and mind the children? Well, mind them out of doors. About 20 minutes before the time for your customary snack, get away from the kitchen and temptation. Do this every day for a couple of weeks and you will find that you are no longer hungry at that hour.

Of course, if you work in an office, you can't break your routine just because you are in the habit of eating a candy bar around 11 o'clock in the morning. After all, you have your job. But the thing for you to do is to add an egg to your breakfast menu. One soft-boiled egg counts 75 calories but provides good protein that sticks to the ribs. With a balanced breakfast under your belt, you are not so apt to think about candy in the middle of the morning.

Anyway, you have your pride! Tell the girls at the office you are not going to eat sweets between meals. Or, if overeating at mealtime is your dietary indiscretion, announce to the family that you're having no more second helpings. You might even make a little side bet with them—if you can find any takers—that you're sticking with your resolution. Do anything that will bolster your will power. But do it gayly. Make it fun.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

When a child grows and thrives and is happy, comfortable and active on the diet given her, then one cannot consider the lack of a daily bowel movement to be anything of great significance.

I know the idea of a daily movement is so ingrained as to be almost impossible of eradication. But, it ought to be pretty obvious that if the child has all the proper foods, plenty of roughage to stimulate bowel activity and is and always has been "constipated" in the sense of no "daily" movement, it must be a personal habit.

Even babies differ greatly in the number of bowel movements daily, and some perfectly well babies regularly go 48 or even 72 hours without a movement and then show no indication of a constipated stool.

This, of course, is a nursing baby, for bottle babies can have their formulas so adjusted that eventually there will be a bowel movement daily.

Mrs. A. R. says, "We have had trouble with our daughter since she was born. She eats well but we have always had to give her something to force a bowel movement.

"No matter how much we do for this—and how it takes so much to result in an elimination—she never has a normal movement without it. This has me quite worried. In every other way she is very healthy. She is 15 months old, weighs 25 pounds and is sturdy. We give her raw and cooked fruits and plenty of water. Will you please give us your advice. I wrote you before and hope this time my letter will be published."

I feel sorry when I hear anything has gone wrong with a letter. I suppose one must expect this when one gets thousands weekly.

It may be if you would be patient about waiting until nature acts of its own accord, inevtably the child would establish some kind of rhythm of evacuation which would be natural to her.

The use of laxatives force an unnatural evacuation and there will be constipation until the intestines have a collection of refuse sufficient to stimulate a movement.

Give the child an opportunity to establish a good habit by putting her on the toilet (a low stool is best) about 20 minutes after a meal. Even if she is not successful, eventually she will be and a regular hour for evacuation is in itself a good habit.

Be sure the diet contains whole grain foods. Wheat germ daily, or yeast, plus all kinds of vegetables and fruits, both cooked and raw and plenty of milk, meat, eggs, cheese and fowl ought to insure a diet that, allied with patience and regularity, should prevent any necessity for laxatives.

Our leaflet "Types of Stools" discusses constipation and foods and formulas which are most laxative in their influence. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Florence Blanchfield Made Colonel

By Genevieve Reynolds

Succeeding Col. Julia O. Fikke as superintendent of the Army Nurse Corps, blonde, dignified Florence A. Blanchfield received the rank of colonel yesterday. She was formally sworn in at a ceremony held at 1818 H Street Northwest. The new surgeon general of the Army, Maj.Gen. Norman T. Kirk, pinned on one of her new eagles and the deputy surgeon general, Brig. Gen. Larry B. McFee, fastened the second eagle on her shoulder.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

With the promotion of Colonel Blanchfield, three women can now sport the eagles of a colonel. The other two are Colonel Fikke, retiring superintendent of the Army Nurse Corps, and Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, director of the WAACS.

Col. Robert Kennedy administered the oath to both the new Surgeon General Kirk and Colonel Blanchfield.

"Two thousand a month for the next year is the number of nurses needed for the Army Nurse Corps," said Col. Blanchfield, in a press conference following the ceremony. "And I am glad that the majority of nurses want to serve overseas."

Asked if this quota of 24,000 nurses would deplete the civilian supply, she answered that it isn't so much a shortage of nurses that is causing trouble in civil life, as it is the poor distribution. With the 26,000 or 27,000 nurses graduating this year, she thinks the supply will be ample for both the Army and civilian demands.

Asked about the value of nurses' aides, Colonel Blanchfield replied: "In my opinion the nurses' aides constitute a highly patriotic group of women doing an unusually good job. They get no remuneration and work at great inconvenience to themselves. Nobody can accuse them of having any other motive in mind but pure patriotism. This group is required to have 80 training and 150 practice hours."

She said that she was impressed particularly with this nurses' aide group, for it is made up largely of working girls—waitresses who stand on their feet all day; Government girls and store clerks. The group of leisured women who volunteer for nurses' aides also do good work, but the colonel admires the working girls who give up their free time to do this job. She told how the nurses' aides are relieving the professional nurses of time-consuming subprofessional chores.

As for the requirements of nurses, they should not be over 45 years of age. They should have received an all-round training course. The Army will supply more specialized training such as instruction for defense measures, against parachute and mechanized attack, and frequent gas-mask drills. Also, physical training exercises and regular drilling periods are an important feature of their orientation, according to Colonel Blanchfield.

"We have no fear of a great surplus of nurses after the war," declared Col. Blanchfield. "In the first place, they will be demobilized more slowly than after World War I. And with the new emphasis on public health Government and industry will employ more nurses. Also there is a group hospitalization plan, which certainly will grow and not decrease, which will employ many nurses."

Prior to the retirement of Colonel Fikke, superintendent of the Nurses Corps, Colonel Blanchfield was assistant superintendent with the rank of lieutenant colonel. Most of Colonel Blanchfield's childhood was spent in Virginia. Her hospital training was acquired at South Side Hospital, Pittsburgh, and Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. She served in France in the last war and has been stationed at The Presido, San Francisco; Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.; Camp John Hay and Fort McKinley, the Philippine Islands. She also served in China.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman of 30, Reared Under Drunkard Father's Reign of Terror, Strongly Feels It Is a Mother's Duty to Deliver Children From That Living Hell

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am the daughter of a drunkard. For that reason, I read with a great deal of interest your discussion of "H. B. L.'s" letter published May 27. I am 30 years old and have been in Washington 10 years. Now I have attained a certain degree of security. My working and living conditions are pleasant. But I cannot shake off the shadow of my unhappy childhood. I still remember my father beating my older sister. That picture will stay with me always. My mother has been dead for four years. My father is still a drunkard and the most contemptible person I have ever known.

Today he lives alternately with my older sister, now married and the mother of two children, and with my brother, who is married. I have another sister who lives in Washington, and the four of us have normal intelligence; but none of us has emotional stability or backbone. I am wondering what "H. B. L.'s" son of 17 and daughter of 20 think of her for having brought them up in such an unfavorable environment. For myself, I have tried to make every excuse for my mother. She was untrained, provincial and fear-ridden. But I feel that her four children would have fared far better if she had brought us up in one room, where there would have been peace.

Hangover of Fear Handicaps Her Today

From my own well-remembered torment in such a home as "H. B. L." describes, I would advise an immediate departure from the situation. This was the advice you gave, Miss Haworth; but I would have liked to see it worded even more strongly. Material "security" is nothing,—when purchased at the price of haunting memories of the ugly doings of a drunken father. If "H. B. L." has not already lost the love and respect of her children, she could probably take some of the curse off the past by immediately changing the status quo. If I were that girl of 20, I would enlist in the WAVES or the WAACS. If she could have the good fortune to make an early happy marriage, she may yet attain to a normal life. But every day is going to count against her from now on; and in another year with her parents, she will be a morbid, fear-ridden personality.

I think that the boy has less chance of attaining normal happiness. An adolescent boy, secretly ashamed of his father, is a prey to many unhealthy thoughts. My brother never has been drunk; but, on the other hand, he cannot behave "naturally" in the company of people who are drinking. Nor can any of us girls. We have hastily left streetcars or buses, rather than witness the awful spectacle of a drunken man. And after my brother has been in the company of drinking people, he has an attack of "nerves," so that a stranger seeing him might think that he himself had been drinking.

As a psychologist, you will recognize that each of the four of us has an inferiority complex, that manifests itself in many vagaries. I won't go into the details of our peculiarities; but I will say that you could search the world over and never find four more unhappy persons. We rarely see each other. Each one is uncomfortable in the other's presence. We never speak of my father. He is the skeleton in the closet that can step out any minute and turn four middle-aged people into terrified children. And this despite the fact that we are honest, hard-working, fairly intelligent and good-looking individuals who have been "on our own" for years.

Would Give 'H.B.L.' Firm Push Into Action

More for the sake of her children than herself, "H. B. L." needs to make an instant decision. She and the children should pick up and leave next payday; and, if necessary, go separate ways in pursuit of self-respect and happiness. In case this letter comes to her attention, I cannot emphasize too strongly the importance of acting immediately and decisively,—burning bridges with one bold stroke. My chief criticism of her is her mistaken dependence on material things. Her "home" is already broken. There is nothing constructive left to do but to pack up and get out, explaining to her children: "You are free. Your father and I have made a mess of our lives . . . and you owe us nothing."

The reason I insist that it is her responsibility to make this decision and head the walkout is because I know from experience that children who have lived in such hell for years do not find it easy to make any decision,—much less one that smacks of abandoning their mother. They are too fear-ridden, for themselves and for her, to leave her side, unless she can give them courage by her own example. In conclusion, let me say that I well know the "poor taste" of personal disclosures; but I am reaching out to give "H. B. L." a firm push into action; and I feel that good taste is well sacrificed for Christian charity. MARY N.

Housewife Key Person In War on Inflation

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to say to "N. B. R.," whose letter was published May 23, that her wholesome definition of a good housewife was a pleasure to read. As she says, the term, "housewife," has come into disrepute in modern society because so many shiftless women use marriage as an excuse for ducking civic responsibilities. No woman worth her salt has ever lived a life of isolation from the community; and today more than ever, housewives must be wide-awake citizens. The housewife is the "key person" in the Nation's fight against money inflation. As such, she is called to one of the most important battle stations on the "total war" front.

The housewife's power derives from the fact that she holds the purse strings of the civilian population. And if every housewife will refuse to buy at black markets, the position of the black marketeers will be reduced to absurdity. By refusing to pay more than the published ceiling price for any commodity, the housewife not only (1) spares the OPA the necessity of employing many additional official price-checkers, at public expense; but (2) keeps the honest merchant in business. Thus she does the community a triple service,—effecting a double economy, while guaranteeing a market source that supplies certified merchandise.

'Ceiling Price' Classes Held Every Wednesday

However, I feel sure that "N. B. R." would agree with me that the proposition of checking ceiling prices as of March, 1942, was a well-nigh impossible task. And it was in recognition of this fact that the OPA has now, at long last, given us a list of ceiling prices that we women can understand. Furthermore, OPA officials have finally yielded to consumer demand,—in the matter of sending official spokesmen to the D. C. Price Institute, to explain "ceiling" regulations to Washington housewives. Hereafter, classes for housewives who "want to know their groceries" will be held every Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the Consumer Center, at 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest. This course will prepare women to become members of the Price Panel on the local Rationing Boards; to become Price Assistants; and, also, to be of invaluable private assistance in helping the country control inflation. M. F. R.

Footnote to Answer Given 'Woman-Hater'

MEMO TO "SECOND LIEUTENANT": Due to an oversight in make-up, a line was omitted from the concluding paragraph of my reply to your letter published yesterday,—in which I summed up my opinion as to why you are becoming a woman-hater. The sentence should have read: "Your mistake has been two-fold, I should guess,—(1) looking for sweet simplicity in fast company; and (2) wearing wolf's clothing while pursuing the quest." Point No. 1 was dropped out of the reply, and I feel it is important to your happiness to get it squarely before you. M. H.

When you are looking for a food that will supply vitamins in your diet, consider the avocado, calavo, alligator or by whatever name you want to call it. Of course this fruit is no waist-line reducer but it is a worthwhile food for it contributes vitamins galore, protein, fat and carbohydrates. Then too its mineral analysis is excellent.

Avocados vary widely in size, shape and color. But experience proves that appearance is no guide to quality and flavor. They are ready to use when almost butter-soft. At this stage they will yield readily to gentle pressure when held between the palms of the hands. Do not pinch the fruit.

If the fruit is too firm leave at room temperature for a few days. Wrapping the fruit in newspaper and storing in dark place will hasten ripening. After the fruit has softened to the ready-to-eat stage, place it in the warmest part of the refrigerator to keep it from ripening further. To keep a partially used one from darkening, cover with waxed paper or sprinkle with lemon juice.

Meat being the problem it is, the calavo can be used in its place. Let's fit a salad made of this fruit into a dinner menu.

China to Fight On, Expert Tells D.A.R. Members

Charles Awret, former technical adviser of the League of Nations to the Chinese government in Chungking, lectured yesterday afternoon on the subject "China, Land of Yesterday and Tomorrow" at the meeting of the Kate Waller Barrett Chapter of the D. A. R. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Henry Byrne Weaver, jr., with Mrs. Ebner Duncan presiding.

On the basis of his experiences in China, Mr. Awret stated he is certain that China will not make a separate peace. "With Russia victorious, with Tunisia in Allied hands, with invasion of the European continent hourly nearer, China's hope rises. She knows that one of the next steps in the global war is strong action in the Pacific. She knows that for her the wisest course is to await the outcome of these events."

Of the will of the Chinese people to fight the war through to a finish, and to set a course in line with the other democratic nations of the world, Mr. Awret is completely convinced. He was in Chungking when that city suffered the terrific air onslaught of the Japanese. He described the havoc wrought in the crowded quarters of the city, where incendiary bombs rained down on the fragile wooden houses. He was, he said, indelibly impressed with the courage and unflagging resistance of the Chinese in the face of these attacks, for which they were unprepared.

In his studies for the League of Nations, Mr. Awret said, he was much impressed with the vast undeveloped mineral and power resources of Szechuan Province, which is almost the size of Texas, the seat of the present wartime capital of Chungking. He pointed out that the prime necessity for the development of these resources is adequate transportation.

His journey into Szechuan, he said, was made over the famous Burma Road. In his work for the league he acted as technical adviser to the Chungking government on the subjects of flood-control, improvement of the irrigation system, development of transportation, and the appraisal of the economic potentialities of the Upper Yangtse Valley.

This Haywire World

"What do you think of the new dress regulations?"

"They sound perfectly haywire to me. But then of course everybody at WPB is crazy."

"I know. They're even crazier at OPA. Look at the mess they've made of rationing."

"That's it! No system, Bert says."

"Absolutely no coordination, Clarence says."

"The whole thing is they're not running the war with any system."

"That's just what Bert says. No order! No method!"

"Has your new dress come yet?"

"No. You know how Sailem's are. The place is a madhouse."

"Did you call up?"

"Yes, but they can't tell you anything definite. Everybody's completely up in the air."

"They never had much organization there to begin with."

"That's it—no method."

"Going to the club tomorrow?"

"I don't think so. It's such a waste of time."

"Those business meetings take forever. No system."

"The whole trouble is women have no sense of organization."

"I know it. Get a bunch of them together and it's a madhouse."

"Men are just as bad though. Bert says the Kangaroos lose their minutes and get their treasurer's report all balled up."

"Clarence says the Royal Antelopes' meetings are completely haywire."

"Dot Flitt's going to work!"

"Where? In the Government?"

"No; she wouldn't work there. It's too wacky. She'd like to get something connected with the theater."

"That would be the wackiest business in the world. Why doesn't she try radio?"

"Oh, they say radio's completely haywire. No system."

"Why doesn't she become a columnist?"

"You know what madhouses newspapers are. Dot hasn't strong nerves."

"Why doesn't she go into a nice, quiet bank?"

"She was thinking of trying the Granite National. But they say everybody's running around in circles there."

"Aviations' got a future, everyone says."

"Yes, but it's a new business and completely crazy."

"Well, why doesn't she just stay at home?"

"That house! Why, it's an insane asylum."

"Then, what on earth is she going to do?"

"She's thinking of organizing a school."

"What kind of a school?"

"One to train organizers."

Sight-Seeing in D. C. 'Frozen' for Duration

Horse and Buggy All That's Left Of a Once Thriving Industry Here

By Martha Rhyne

In prewar days Washington, D. C., was famed for two giant industries—United States Government, Inc., and a booming, well-organized tourist trade. A sightseer's heaven is this city on the Potomac whose very creation and existence is bound in history, tradition and things purely American.

But war has stripped the city for action. Although United States Government has expanded as far as is humanly, financially and alphabetically possible, the tourist trade is a stalemate, if not nonexistent.

At the present time there's only one known legitimate sightseeing tour, consisting of a horse, a buggy and a man by the name of Jimmy Grayes, whose headquarters are somewhere in the vicinity of the Botanic Garden. His monopoly goes unnoticed by the trust busters and by harried Washingtonians who find that the home fires burn brighter at the end of the day than the thrilling monuments and edifices which, in years past, attracted swarms of travel-minded folks to the Capitol city.

Most of us dodge Union Station—even taxi drivers have the allergy. When, of pure necessity, one enters the imposing terminal he is greeted by the most magnanimous push in the history of our country. Impatient armchair strategists would think a second front had been opened in the general area of the District of Columbia if they visited Union Station, for every conceivable branch of the service is represented there. Perceptible limps in the walk of a large per cent of the station patrons are less likely to be physical deformities than tired feet.

This famous Union Station is positively the worst place in the world to be caught in a practice blackout—bar none. The vast spaces of the concourse loom black and hazy in the dimout and borrowing Diogenes' lamp would be the only possible way to identify the person you came to meet. Loading taxicabs at the extreme end of the station necessitate an uninviting hike. Only by strategic and careful movement can one locate the auction-like sounds which emanante from the platform and guide cab seekers to their destination.

There's an amazing informality at all the places which you choose to visit on a self-imposed sightseeing tour. You make conversation with strangers chiefly because you don't know what goes on and neither do they. Don't be at all surprised if you never saw that old ivy-covered well in front of the Capitol. A passing soldier solved the mystery for me by telling me what it was and from whence it came. And I didn't even ask him and he didn't even turn his head in my general direction.

There is an unnecessary feeling that creeps right up your spine if you visit the Capitol for any other reason than business. The guard eyes with consternation an overstuffed bag which carries nothing more than the bare essentials of a woman's existence. A row of cameras, carefully checked, greet the sightseer once he is inside the Capitol foyer. One may or may not see the Capitol to his own liking, depending upon whether he successfully sidesteps the terribly-glad-to-see-you tour guide. Congressional oratory is no match for the song of the guide who conducts you through the halls of the Nation's Capitol.

For the duration of Hitler, Hirohito and other such pests, the FBI, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the State, War and Navy Departments and the war agencies are closed to the public. But the libraries, art galleries, museums and monuments are open. Even a gaze at the White House from the other side of the street is permissible though wide-eyed strangers no longer roam in and out of the palatial East Room and other sections of the presidential residence.

It's too bad that people here in vital war work don't have more time to enjoy and appreciate their surroundings. But enthusiasm, vitality and effort are now pitched into the boiling pot in the hope of getting the war over as soon as possible. Sightseeing will have to wait. Though the past is prologue, people nowadays have an eye to the future when sightseeing will go unhampered with wartime regulations. Washington is like that.

Two Women Welders Attend Mrs. Roosevelt's Press Conference; Convince Reporters Theirs (the Welders') Is Woman's Worthiest, Most Thrilling, Wartime Work

I wanna be—a welder. I wanna feel important because I'm doing something to help win the war . . . and win a prize in a shipyard . . . be sent to Washington for the first time . . . and have the First Lady and the ladies of the press "oh" and "ah" over me as they ask question after question, eying me with admiration tinged with envy.

That's the life . . . and to heck with columning; tearing around from conference, to interview, to reception, to tea, to dinner — dervish-whirl fashion, and always in a dither for fear you'll miss Something.

A hasty decision, all this. But at least it was prompted by two very good "reasons." They were Miss Vera Anderson, champion welder, and Mrs. Hermina (Billie) Strmiska, runner-up, in a recent shipyard contest conducted by the United States Maritime Commission. They won a trip to Washington, attended Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference yesterday . . . and convinced a corps of 20-odd reporters that woman's wartime work is at the welding bench. Definitely.

Her Sweetheart's In the Navy

Pretty, streamlined, and smart in her two-piece black frock, set off with a white hat and matching accessories, 19-year-old Miss Anderson let it be known—in a beguiling way, of course—that she wouldn't change places with any of us . . . or with anybody else. She's with the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corp., of Pascagoula, Miss. She has been a welder for eight months, after studying at Gulfport Training School. She finished high school at 15; has been working ever since, first as a saleswoman, then in a variety of other small-pay jobs.

"What I'm doing now is not so monotonous," she said. "In fact, it's thrilling . . . because I feel I'm really doing something to help win the war. It's wonderful," she burbled on, like a sub-deb getting ready for her first formal dance, "to think I'm helping build a ship that the boys will be sailing later!"

Was her sweetheart, by any chance, a sailor? I asked. "He is," she answered, eyes dancing. "He's in the Navy."

So she doesn't mind a bit that she has to get up every morning at 4:30 o'clock, drive 37 miles to the shipyard, and work steadily from 7 a. m. to 3:30 p. m., with only half an hour off for lunch. That means she's in bed every night during the week at 9 p. m.; and that her leisure time is a missing quantity.

There's Plenty On the Credit Side

On the credit side, though, there's a lot to consider—besides the most important factor: that she's helping to win the war. Her salary is much better than it ever was before. She's paid by the piece, with a bonus for speed, and her weekly check ranges from $68 to $85.

After the war? Well, she hopes she can keep on welding. "It's so interesting," she added.

Mrs. Strmiska, who is employed by the Kaiser Shipbuilding Co. in Oregon, said her bit as a welder was only a duration affair. "I'll go back to homework soon as the war's over," she averred. Her current job is her first. She went into it 11 months ago, and was trained by her husband, who now works the same shift—1:30 a. m. to 9 a. m.

"Welding takes a lot of patience," Mrs. Strmiska said. "It's terribly tedious, until you learn to control the metal . . . and then, all at once, it becomes completely fascinating. I'm dead tired when the day's work is done, but I'm always eager to get back to the job the next day."

Looking no more like my idea of a lady welder than did Miss Anderson, Mrs. Strniska was trimly turned out in a buttercup yellow suit, a white beret pulled neatly over her blond, bobbed hair, and white gloves and shoes. She lost the contest to Miss Anderson by only five minutes, the winner finishing her project in something over 24 minutes. Mrs. Strniska competed against 100 women welders in her own shop before she set off with flying colors for the finals at Pascagoula.

Both welders were pretty proud that their records stack up well with the men's; and both affirmed that they got equal pay and equal opportunity with the men. Mrs. Strniska averages from $71 to $76 a week; and she, like Miss Anderson, invests a good deal of her income in war bonds.

Quite a Whirl In Washington

The two are having quite a whirl in Washington. After Mrs. Roosevelt's conference yesterday they went on a brief sightseeing trip, and then up to Capitol Hill, where Mississippi Representative William M. Colmer had a small luncheon for Miss Anderson. Yesterday afternoon, there was more sightseeing and then a press conference in the office of the Maritime Commission's vice chairman, Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery. Their calendar was accented with numerous other appointments and entertainments, too; and will continue to be until they leave Washington.

But at 11:30 yesterday morning Miss Anderson doubted she would ever glimpse anything, anywhere, that would impress her more than the White House. "It's the most beautiful place I ever saw!" she said, with a sigh.

There were sighs all around the room before the conference was over . . . and at least one newspaperwoman expressed the reason for hers just after the two visitors told what their weekly paychecks averaged; and how much they enjoyed their jobs.

"Tell me," asked the reporter, "do they need any more women welders?"

Authorities On Labor Here From Bolivia

With a view to establishing a social security system in their own country patterned somewhat after our own, Remberto Capriles Rico, Undersecretary of Labor of Bolivia, and Gaston Arduz Eguia, director general of social investigations in the Ministry of Labor, have arrived in this country for a stay of two months, invited by the Department of State.

Senor Capriles Rico and Senor Arduz Eguia are in Washington for several weeks and will then start on a tour of the United States to make a study of labor legislation, visiting the principal mining and agricultural regions.

The visitors, discussing the social problems of Bolivia said: "The Bolivian Government is interested in implanting a comprehensive system of social security in Bolivia. At the present time a commission made up of the several directors of individual employes' group-insurance organizations has proposed the legislative bases and a project for a law which the government may recommend to the approaching Congress. The government is also interested in organizing the inspection and supervising of working conditions, including health and social security problems."

Three years ago the Bolivian Government appointed these two labor authorities to the task of drafting a new labor code which would also contain a project for a social security system. The code was prepared and submitted to the Government in 1942. This year's session of the Bolivian Congress is expected to take action on it. Two years ago Senor Capriles Rico and Senor Arduz Eguia published jointly a book on Bolivia's social problems, dealing with the living and working conditions of the country's workers. The title is "El Problema Social en Bolivia: Condiciones de Vida y Trabajo."

Jeanne Dyer Is Wed to Army Officer

Following the completion of their wedding trip, Lieut. and Mrs. Charles Rawlings Beaumont will make their home in Dayton, Ohio, where the bridegroom is stationed.

The bride is the former Miss Jeanne T. Dyer, daughter of Mrs. Richard Clinton Dyer and the late Mr. Dyer. Lieutenant Beaumont is the son of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles Rawlings Beaumont.

Their marriage took place on May 31 in the Walter Reed Chapel with the Rev. John P. Volk officiating at the 2 o'clock service. Joseph B. Bowling escorted his niece to the altar.

The bride studied at Gunston Hall and Lieutenant Beaumont attended the University of Maryland. He is attached to the Army Air Corps.

HOW A POST WANT AD WORKED FAST or
EARLY MORNING BUSINESS FROM POST AD

6:10 A.M. is awfully early in the day to do business but Mrs. G. C. actually sold all her furniture for a one room apartment at that hour of the morning.

It happened like this: Mrs. G. C. placed a "For Sale" ad in The Washington Post, and on the first day the ad appeared she sold all her furniture at 6:10 A. M.

Apparently, the buyer knew the tremendous pulling power of Post Want Ads and wanted to get there first.

For QUICK RESULTS in advertising "For Sale" articles call NAtional 4200 and ask for an ad-taker. The Post will do the rest.

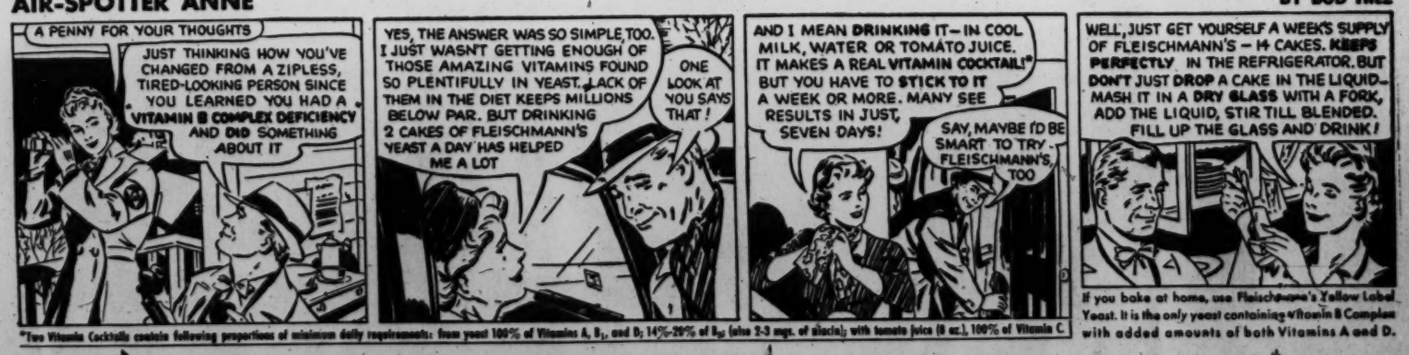
AIR-SPOTTER ANNE — BY BUD HILL



A PENNY FOR YOUR THOUGHTS
JUST THINKING HOW YOU'VE CHANGED FROM A ZIPLESS, TIRED-LOOKING PERSON SINCE YOU LEARNED YOU HAD A VITAMIN B COMPLEX DEFICIENCY AND DID SOMETHING ABOUT IT
YES, THE ANSWER WAS SO SIMPLE, TOO. I JUST WASN'T GETTING ENOUGH OF THOSE AMAZING VITAMINS FOUND SO PLENTIFULLY IN YEAST. LACK OF THEM IN THE DIET KEEPS MILLIONS BELOW PAR. BUT DRINKING 2 CAKES OF FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST A DAY HAS HELPED ME A LOT ONE LOOK AT YOU SAYS THAT!
AND I MEAN DRINKING IT—IN COOL MILK, WATER OR TOMATO JUICE. IT MAKES A REAL VITAMIN COCKTAIL!* BUT YOU HAVE TO STICK TO IT A WEEK OR MORE. MANY SEE RESULTS IN JUST, SEVEN DAYS!
SAY, MAYBE I'D BE SMART TO TRY FLEISCHMANN'S, TOO
WELL, JUST GET YOURSELF A WEEK'S SUPPLY OF FLEISCHMANN'S—14 CAKES. KEEPS PERFECTLY IN THE REFRIGERATOR. BUT DON'T JUST DROP A CAKE IN THE LIQUID—MASH IT IN A DRY GLASS WITH A FORK, ADD THE LIQUID, STIR TILL BLENDED. FILL UP THE GLASS AND DRINK!

*Two Vitamin Cocktails contain following proportions of minimum daily requirements: from yeast 100% of Vitamins A, B_1, and D; 14%-29% of B_2 (also 2-3 mgs. of niacin); with tomato juice (8 oz.), 100% of Vitamin C.

If you bake at home, use Fleischmann's Yellow Label Yeast. It is the only yeast containing Vitamin B Complex with added amounts of both Vitamins A and D.

Public Schools Report Slump In Graduates

As Abbot Vocational School has canceled graduation exercises because only a trio of students now remain in the senior class, other Washington public schools yesterday reported similiar decreases in the number of graduates who will receive diplomas this June.

Only the junior high schools indicated increases in the size of 1943 graduating classes.

The call of the armed services and the lure of plentiful jobs were given as the answer to the drop in graduates by officials interviewed by The Post. Vocational students in many cases were offered positions long before they were scheduled to graduate.

Earnings Temptations

"American youth can't withstand the prospect of money jingling in their pockets," Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools, noted yesterday.

Comparative figures for June, 1942, and June, 1943, follow:

Divisions 1-9, senior high schools, approximately 2170, as compared to 2504 in 1942; junior high schools, 2482, 2375 in 1942; teachers' college, 66, 78 in 1942; vocational schools, 93, 99 in 1942.

Divisions 10-13, Senior high schools, 451, 542 in 1942; junior high schools, 1194, 1086 in 1942; teachers' college, 54, 80 in 1942; vocational schools, 44, 75 in 1942.

District Graduations

Divisions 1-9:

Nieman Awards To Be Restricted

Nieman fellowships for newspapermen will be restricted this year to men outside the draft in age or military availability, the Nieman Foundation at Harvard University announced yesterday.

As the fellowships are awarded only to men whose applications are supported by newspapers ready to grant them leaves of absence for a year's study, this limits the Nieman program this year to men whose papers feel that preparation for handling postwar issues is important enough to justify a leave during the war. Applications will be accepted until August 1 for the fall term which will open November 1.

Board Proposal

Speed Asked In Teachers Course in D.C.

In line with the accelerated educational programs in other colleges throughout the country, establishment of summer school courses at Wilson and Miner Teachers Colleges this year will be proposed at the meeting of the Board of Education today in the Franklin School.

The recommendation has been made jointly by Dr. Walter E. Hager and Dr. E. A. Clark, presidents of Wilson and Miner, respectively.

The intensive program (summer sessions have never before been held in District teachers colleges) would be designed to provide maximum college education for male students who may be drafted before or during the next college year, and to assist students who desire to graduate as early as possible, but are unable to afford tuition at other summer schools. It would also enable part-time students to continue on that basis through the summer months and complete their courses at an advanced date.

Courses would be selected on the basis of their appeal to the greatest number of students and would generally be in the "required" category. A possible source of funds to finance the program is a portion of congressional appropriations given for summer sessions in elementary and high schools.

At the meeting today, a report of study of juvenile delinquency in the junior high schools will also be presented.

The following retirements will be up for approval: Mrs. Mary W. Holmes, Lovejoy, Miss Sarah T. Watson, Edmonds; Miss Mabel E. Duehay, Rudolph; Miss Helen J. Moore, Banneker; Benjamin Washington, Armstrong, and Mrs. Marion Y. Brunner, Bunker Hill.

Steel Trap Costs Gardener $25 for Injuries to Dog

In imposing fine Judge Neilson told Ross he would not uphold that type of crime and if he were ever brought before him again on similar charges it would mean a jail sentence.

Inquest Planned Into Shooting Of Marine Private

An inquest will be held at the District Morgue this morning into the fatal shooting, May 21, of Marine Pvt. Joseph Witcufsky, 19, of Shenandoah, Pa.

Frank Bodmer, 36, 14 Thirty-third Street Northeast, Third Class Naval shore patrolman, who fired a bullet into the Marine's back when the latter broke from custody, will appear at the hearing.

It was reported that the shore patrolman apprehended Witcufsky in the 500 block of Ninth Street Northwest, and that the Marine broke from custody and started to run. Bodmer, it was said, shouted a warning to the fugitive and fired a shot over his head in an attempt to halt him.

When Witcufsky failed to stop, Bodmer shot him in the back, police records asserted.
